INTRODUCTION.

In the year 1843 the Camden Society published the first volume of Albert Way's valuable edition of the Promptorium, The third volume completing the work appeared in 1865. The scope of the work is comprehensively described on the title-page which I here give:

'Promptorium Parvulorum sive Clericorum Dictionarius Anglo-Latinus Princeps, Auctore Fratre Galfrido Grammatico dicto, ex Ordine Fratrum Predicatorum, Northfolciensi, circa A. D. MCCCXL. olim ex Officina Pynsoniana editum, nunc ab integro, Commentariolis subjectis, ad fidem Codicum recensuit Albertus Way, A.M. Londini: Sumptibus Societatis Camdenensis, MDCCCLXV.'

This important work has been for many years out of print, and a second-hand copy of the complete book is very rarely to be met with in booksellers' catalogues. The third volume, with its valuable Preface and Appendix, is especially rare, and can only be obtained at a high price. As there has been for some time an urgent demand for a new edition of the Promptorium, it has been thought that something ought to be done to supply this desideratum. At first the idea was to bring out a reprint of the Camden edition with revision of the etymological matter. But it was soon seen that to produce a satisfactory edition from the point of view of modern scholarship it would be necessary to examine some of the MSS. used by Way. For such an undertaking the present writer did not feel himself prepared. It was therefore arranged with the Secretary of the Early English Text Society that an edition of the Promptorium should be prepared, based upon one MS., the Sylkestede MS. in the Chapter Library of Winchester Cathedral. This MS. is indicated by Way by the letter (S), and is characterized by him as a copy 'of much value.' The volume in which it is contained was entrusted to the editor (to be used in the Bodleian Library) by the liberality of the Dean and Chapter, through the friendly mediation of Dean Kitchin. For which kindness the editor wishes to express his grateful acknowledgement.

The MS. is in a fine volume in perfect preservation, in the original oak-boards, covered with leather. The contents, besides the Promptorium, are Liber Catonis, Liber Equivocorum, Parvum Doctrinale or Liber de Parabolis Philosophiae, Liber Theodoli, and Liber Anioni, the last consisting of fables in hexameter and pentameter verse. Our MS. is on paper, consisting of 114 leaves; dimensions $13\frac{1}{2}$ inches by 10 inches. The writing is in double columns, in a bold clear hand without any rubrication.

The volume was in the possession of Thomas Sylkestede, Prior of Winchester about 1498. He was a liberal benefactor to the fabric of the cathedral, a friend of Bishop Fox, to whom he rendered assistance in founding Corpus Christi College, Oxford; he died in 1524. On a leaf of parchment at the beginning of the volume is written: 'Liber T. Sylkestede, prec. xiij s. iiij d.,' and lower on the page in a smaller hand: 'Anno domini MCCCC. iiij^{xx} xiiij' (A.D. 1494). On the reverse of one of the fly-leaves at the end is written: 'Iste liber est de domo Sancti Swythini Wynton. Qui eum alienaverit Anathema sit.'

In the present edition the text of the Winchester MS. is printed precisely as it stands; the original arrangement of the words has been preserved, and nothing has been omitted. The original consists of two distinct portions and alphabetical arrangements, a Nominale and a Verbale, according to a plan, of which other instances occur in contemporary works of a similar nature. It also contains indications of genders, declensions and conjugations, as likewise of certain inflexions of the Latin words. In Way's edition the arrangement was simplified by throwing the whole into one alphabetical order, and the grammatical indications were wholly omitted. It has been thought better to give the text in its entirety, and in its original order, in order that one may be able to see what the first English-Latin Dictionary was really like, and what help the 'parvuli,' or 'clerici' obtained from their 'Promptorium' for the manufacture of the Latin prose of the period.

We will now notice some of the peculiar characteristics of the MS., beginning with certain peculiarities of spelling.

In the Notes that follow the Text, an explanation is given of some of the Promptorium words, with illustrative citations from dictionaries and glossaries and various authors, and etymologies so far as to indicate the source from which they came, and where it seemed to be useful, the forms and meanings in the cognate languages. There will also be found in these Notes readings from the MSS. as cited by Way, in cases where there were scribal errors in the Winchester MS., or where the Winchester MS. was obscure and seemed to require corroboration, correction or illustration. It is to be hoped that the student may be willing to regard with leniency deficiencies and even inaccuracies into which the editor has been betrayed in the work of editing the text and of annotation. Doubtless, the work in both these respects will be found by the well-trained scholar to be amateurish. The editor has had no experience in the editing of texts, and the truth is that in undertaking the task of preparing an edition of the Promptorium for publication his interest was mainly an etymological one. Let me take this opportunity of saying that a critical edition of the Promptorium would be a great boon to the student of the English language, and of English life and manners in the fifteenth century. To such a work the present edition is offered as a humble contribution.

In the following remarks on the Promptorium—the sources, the MSS., the printed editions—I have thought that I could do no better than summarize the information given in Way's admirable Preface, to which the student is referred for an abundance of valuable details, should he wish for a starting-point for further investigations. Way's Preface is a marvellous piece of work—a monument of laborious research, and of well-balanced scholarly judgement. I have only made use of his material so far as to put the reader in possession of facts which seem to be necessary for the proper understanding of the position the Promptorium holds in lexicographical literature, and as a starting-point it seems to me that it would be impossible to give any one who may ask what is the value of the Promptorium a better answer to the question than by quoting the comprehensive words with which Way begins his Preface:—

'Whether we regard the Promptorium Parvulorum as an authentic record of the English language in the earlier half of the fifteenth century, as illustrative of the provincial dialects of East Anglia, or as explanatory of the numerous archaisms of a debased Latinity that pervade early chronicles and documents, its value can scarcely be too highly estimated. If, on the other hand, we take into consideration the curious evidence which it supplies to those who investigate the arts and manners of bygone times, it were difficult to point out any relic of learning at the period equally full of instruction, and of those suggestive details which claim the attention of students of mediaeval literature and antiquities in the varied departments of archaeological research.'

What is the meaning of the title? 'Promptorium Parvulorum' means 'A store-room for young scholars.' In Wynkyn de Worde the title appears as 'Promptuarium Parvulorum Clericorum.' 'Promptuarium' in late classical Latinity signifies a store-room, repository. In mediaeval times it denoted the department in a conventual or collegiate establishment or the like, whence stores were dispensed, which in a monastery was under the charge of the cellarer. The author gives 'Spence botery or cellary, celarium, promptuarium.' The term was not infrequently used by writers for the title of lexicographical works, summaries and collections literary and artistic. For instance, the 'Promptuarium exemplorum' appended to the 'Sermones de Sanctis,' printed by Julian Notary, in 1510; 'Jo. Pinciani Promptuarium Vocabulorum,' in 1516; 'Promptuarium Latinae Linguae,' printed by Plantin, 1564; and the series of medallion portraits published at Lyons, in 1553, entitled 'Promptuarium Iconum Insigniorum.'

The special subjects which will be dealt with in the following observations will be:

i. The author of the Promptorium, with such traces as may be found of the circumstances of his life and of his literary labours.

ii. The sources from which his Latinity was derived.

iii. The MSS. of his work, and the early printed editions.

I. We learn from the author's own statement in his Preambulum, that the Promptorium was compiled by a Dominican Friar of Lynn Episcopi, Norfolk, A. D. 1440. This monastery of Black Friars, or Friars' Preachers, stood in the eastern part of the town. Few traces are now to be seen. There belonged to it an 'anchorage,' a retreat for an 'anchor' or recluse, and herein possibly the author, who describes himself as 'fratrem praedicatorem reclusum Lenne Episcopi,' had sought a retreat from the more active duties of the monastery to devote his leisure to the task which he had undertaken. If the library of his own house could not supply him with the works necessary for his purpose, doubtless they could have been easily obtained from those of other houses belonging to the Order. The word reclusus used by the author is doubtless used in its technical sense of an 'ankyr,' one who was shut up in a building specially set apart for the purpose, and with a solemn religious service, by episcopal sanction; after which he could not leave his cell except in case of necessity or with the permission of the bishop. The expression in the Preambulum 'sub regula paupertatis' probably refers to the vows taken on the occasion of his becoming a Dominican friar. The author has himself explained the word 'ankyr' by 'recluse,' and given anachorita as the Latin equivalent. An instance of a friar being a 'recluse' (inclusus) at Pagham, in Sussex, is mentioned in the will of St. Richard, Bishop of Chichester (Sussex Archaeol. Coll. I, 174); and we read of an anchoress within the nunnery of Clementhorpe, near York, in 1475 (Madox, Form. Angl. p. 437).

The author was, as we learn from his own words, bred, if not born, in Norfolk: 'comitatus Norfolchie modum loquendi solum sum secutus quem solum ab infancia didici, et solotenus plenius perfectiusque cognovi.' It is remarkable that the peculiarities of the dialect of the county should have been thus distinctly noticed at this period. Reyner informs us that, at an earlier time Samson de Tottington, abbot of Bury St. Edmunds (1182–1211), was accustomed to discourse to the people in the vernacular of Norfolk, the county in which he was born and bred, and that he had a pulpit for the purpose in the conventual church. See Carlyle's Past and Present, xi, and Dict. Nat. Biography.

There has been some uncertainty in regard to the name of the compiler of the Promptorium. In a copy of Pynson's edition, printed in the year 1499, which is preserved in the Cambridge University Library, an entry is found which contains the following statement: 'Autor hujus operis fuit Galfredus Grammaticus dictus, frater Ordinis S. Dominici.' To this friar we find the authorship ascribed by Bale, Bishop of Ossory, himself an East-Anglian, not indeed under the title of the Promptorium, but under that of the Medulla Grammatices, which, however, is distinctly identified by the words of the Preambulum ('Cernentibus sollicite clericorum') as the work more commonly known by the name first mentioned. Bale, whose Catalogue of the writers of Great Britain was published at Basle, in 1559, writes thus :—

'Galfridus Grammaticus ad scholas semper a puero nutritus, sub corruptis, obscuris ac barbaris praeceptoribus, prima ejus artis rudimenta edoctus corruptior ipse aliorum tandem magister evasit. Sibi ipsi nihilominus, non aliter quam olim arrogans ille Palaemon, adfectus, multa tribuebat, tanquam essent cum eo nato simul et bonae literae, et bene dicendi artes obortae, atque cum eo demum moriente et illae simul essent interiturae. Ciceronem, Salustium, Servium, Plinium, Varronem, Vergilium, Horatium, Quintilianum, et alios bonos authores in lecturis ille contempsit; et pro illis ad Latinae linguae perniciem, ac bonorum ingeniorum nauseam, sordes ac feces horribiles ex suo Alexandro [Neccham], Garlandio, Genuensi [author of the Catholicon], et similibus Grammatista protulit. Deditque suis auditoribus opuscula quae sequuntur, Latinis characteribus exarata :—

In doctrinale Alexandri, lib. 3.
In Joannis Garlandi Synonyma, lib. 1. Cum omnis divisio.
In Aequivoca ejusdem, lib. 1. In superiore libro.
Expositiones hymnorum, lib. 1. Iste liber dicitur.
Hortum vocabulorum, lib. 1. Ut enim multos.
Medullam Grammatices, lib. 1. Cernentibus solicite clericorum.

Et ejus farinae alia. Praedicta opuscula omnia vidi, Parisiis atque Londini impressa. Sunt qui in suis scriptis Dominicanum hunc fuisse testentur et claruisse anno a sacratissimo divae virginis partu 1490, Henrico 7 regnante.' (Baleus, Scriptorum Illustrium majoris Brytannie Catalogus, p. 631.)

Pits, in his Catalogue, gives the following account of our author, ascribing to him the compilation of the Promptorium, which he likewise designates by the title of Medulla :—

'Galfridus Grammaticus in orientalibus Angliae partibus natus, ordinis S. Dominici Monachus, ut mecum multi sentiunt. Vir bonus et simplex, atque ita rebus Grammaticis impense deditus, ut inde cognomen assumpserit. In quo genere non illaudata reliquit posteris documenta, quae et Parisiis et Londini fuerunt aliquando typis mandata.'

Here follows a list of the works, including those enumerated by Bale, among which appears the Medulla Grammatices ('cernentibus solicite clericorum'). See Pitsei de Rebus Anglicis Catalogus Scriptorum, p. 679.

Bishop Tanner, in his Bibliotheca Britanico-Hibernica (p. 305), follows the statements of Bale and Pits, and proceeds to notice as follows Geoffrey's English-Latin Dictionary, the MS. of which (Harl. 221) the bishop appears to have examined in Sir Symonds d'Ewes's library :—

'Medullam Grammatices, sive Promptuarium parvulorum sive clericorum, lib. i (Ita incipit Dictionarium Anglo-Latinum intitulat. Promptuarium parvulorum sive clericorum, collectum per fratrem praedicatorem reclusum Lenn. Episc. A. D. 1440; MS. in bibl. D. Sim. d'Ewes, Bar. 4to). "Cernentibus solicite clericorum." Lond. 1499, fol. MS. eccl. Lincoln. . . . Claruit A. D. 1490. Bale et Pits, locis citatis.'

Whatever may have been his patronymic, we may confidently ascribe to the Dominican recluse of Lynn, Galfridus, designated from his special studies 'Grammaticus,' the laborious achievement of the first English-Latin Dictionary. He is doubtless the same person as the expounder of the 'Equivoca' and the 'Synonyma' of John de Garlandia,—entitled 'Magister Galfridus Anglicus' in the editions of those treatises printed by Pynson and W. de Worde.

The author describes with simple earnestness in his Preambulum the troubles of aspiring scholars, who, amidst the prevalent barbarism of his times, thirsted for knowledge like harts for the water-brooks, and in vain sought for guides, so that, like wild asses, they fainted in sobbing and sighs; according to the lament of the prophet, the young children ask bread, and no man breaketh it unto them! 'He drew up for their use a slight compendium, "opus exile," chiefly from the Catholicon, Campus Florum, and Diccionarium. The most ignorant calumniator of the Middle Ages could not speak of the poor recluse in more disparaging terms than he applies to himself. "Rudis et inscius, plusque aptus discere quam docere," he contents himself for the most part with abbreviating the works of earlier grammarians, occasionally seeking counsel from the mouth of his betters, but very rarely venturing to pronounce sentence in his own person . . . The preface ends in a strain which was natural to scholars, who, having seldom any means of procuring books except by transcribing them with their own hand, and being at the mercy of any scribe who might wittingly or unwittingly travesty their most careful works, learnt to detest a blunder as worse than a crime: "I humbly, with prayers, entreat all pedagogues, teachers, and masters, that, when they have examined this little work, they will approve what may, by God's assistance, have been rightly written, and will piously correct and emend what is written ill or erringly; since humble grammarians and boys may look on this short volume as on a mirror, and find freely and immediately the common words which belong to the Latin tongue."' (See J. E. B. Mayor's Latin-English and English-Latin Lexicography in Journal of Classical and Sacred Philology, iv, March 1857.)

The Sources.

II. In Way's Promptorium (vol. i, p. 3) there is printed from the Harl. MS. a list of the authorities consulted by the compiler, by which we may know the sources of the Latin words. The list is as follows:—

Cum aliis liberis et libellis et intellectis, Deo adjuvante cum tota curia celesti.'

1. The first of the 'auctores' is the most highly esteemed of mediaeval dictionaries, the Catholicon or Summa of Johannes de Janua, or Januensis, de Balbis. It has been repeatedly printed, the earliest edition being the noble volume produced at Mayence in 1460, which was followed by another at Venice in 1487. According to Ducange, the author, a native of Genoa in the thirteenth century, combined the works of Papias and Uguitio, and compiled a dictionary 'ex multis diversis doctorum texturis elaboratum atque contextum,' as stated in a colophon from which we learn that his labours were completed in the year 1286.

2. Uguitio.—Ugutio or Huguitio Pisanus was a native of Pisa. He was professor of ecclesiastical jurisprudence at Bologna, circ. 1178, and Bishop of Ferrara from 1190 till his death in 1210. He compiled a Latin dictionary commonly known as 'Huguitionis Pisani Magnae Derivationes sive Dictionarium Etymologicum.' This work, based to a considerable extent upon the 'Origines' of Isidore of Seville, and upon the 'Elementarium Doctrinae Rudimentum' (written circ. 1060) of the Lombard Papias, enjoyed a considerable reputation in the Middle Ages, as is testified by the large number of MSS. still existing; it has never been printed, but a large portion of it is embodied in the 'Catholicon' of Johannes de Janua; it is frequently quoted in the 'De Proprietatibus Rerum' of Bartholomaeus Anglicus and was one of the authorities consulted by Ducange. It may be interesting to note that Dante was probably indebted to Huguitio's etymology of hypocrita for the idea of representing the hypocrites in Hell as wearing mantles which were brilliantly gilded on the outside, while within they were of lead (Inf. xxiii. 61–6); this etymology, which was commonly accepted in the Middle Ages, is as follows:—

'Crisis grece, latine dicitur secretum et judicium et aurum, . . . item a crisis per compositionem hic et hec ypocrita, -te, fictor, simulator, representator alterius persone; et dicitur ypocrita ab yper quod est super, et crisis quod est aurum, quasi superauratus, quia in superficie et extrinsecus videtur esse bonus, cum interius sit malus.' (See Toynbee's Dante Dictionary, p. 545.)

3. Brito.—William Brito was, according to Pits, a native of Wales and a monk of the Franciscan order; he died at Grimsby in 1356. The treatise referred to by the compiler of the Promptorium is probably his 'Summa sive opusculum difficilium vocabulorum Biblie'; sometimes entitled 'Lexicon sive Vocabularium Biblie,' or, as described by Fabricius 'Vocabularius, cum vocabulorum Hebraicorum in Bibliis occurrentium interpretatione Latina.' Some account of this work may be found in Ducange's Preface, § XLIX. It does not appear that the Summa has been printed; MSS. are to be found in the British Museum, in the Cambridge University Library, and in Balliol College, Oxford.

4. Mirivalensis in Campo Florum.—A large number of Latin words are cited as derived from this work. It would appear from the autograph collections by Bishop Bale, preserved in the Bodleian Library among Selden's MSS., that a copy of the Campus Florum existed in Bale's time at Magdalen College, Oxford, and was seen by him, and that he attributed the authorship of the work to Thomas Walleys, a Dominican. The following notices of the Campus Florum occur in these collections at fol. 30:—

'Campus Florum vocabularius quidam erat apud Miram vallem,[1] locum devotis monachis valde amenum, factus circa annum Domini 1359.'—Nicolaus Brigan in Collectionibus.

'Campus Florum (Thomae Gualensis interlined) incipit "Disciplina claustrali deditus apud Miram vallem."[1] Claruit autor anno Domini 1359.—Ex Collegio Magdalene Oxon.'

Under the article of Thomas Walleys, fol. 176, the work is thus noticed more briefly :—

'Thomas Walleys, Dominicanus, doctor Wallicus.'

And at the end of the list of his writings :—

'Campus Florum, copiosus index juris Canonici.—Ex Lelando de viris illustribus.'

No MS. corresponding with Bale's description appears to be found at the present time ; no mention of it is made in Coxe's Catalogue of MSS. in Oxford Colleges.

From Bale we learn that Thomas Walleys (alias Gualensis) was a theologian of Oxford, that he was a strenuous opponent of the tenets advanced by Pope John XXII, and that in consequence, about the year 1332, he suffered imprisonment. It is also stated by Pits that he was living in 1333. Leland has given some particulars relating to Thomas Gualensis on the authority of Leander Albertus, de Viris Illustribus, lib. iv. Leland had seen his commentaries on various books of the Old Testament in the library of Warden Abbey, Bedfordshire. Among numerous writings of Gualensis he thus mentions one existing in the Public Library at Oxford :—'Extat in bibliotheca publica Isiaci liber, cui titulus Campus Florum a Guallensi scriptus, copiosus videlicet Juris Canonici index.'

5. Johannes de Garlondia in diccionario scolastico.—According to Tanner and some after writers Johannes de Garlandia was an Englishman who studied at Oxford and subsequently established himself in the University of Paris early in the thirteenth century; in 1229 he became a professor at Toulouse, but he returned to Paris, and probably died there soon after 1250. He dedicated his treatise 'De mysteriis rerum que sunt in ecclesia' to Fulke Basset, Bishop of London (1241–59). In a poem entitled 'De Triumphis Ecclesiae' he thus speaks of his native land :—

'Anglia cui mater fuerat, cui Gallia nutrix,
Matri nutricem praefero mente meam.'

The triumph of the Church which Johannes commemorates at greatest length is the Albigensian crusade, and in his Dictionary he tells us that he saw at Toulouse, among other engines of war, that by which Simon de Montfort was killed in 1218.

The Dictionarius has been edited by M. Géraud in the 'Collection de documents inédits sur l'histoire de France,' and subsequently by Thomas Wright in his Volume of Vocabularies, printed at the expense of Joseph Mayer in 1857. Wright in his Introduction gives a picturesque summary of this treatise.

6. Commentarius Curialium.—This little work is found in a collection of treatises principally by Johannes de Garlandia (to whom it is also there attributed), preserved in the library of Caius College, Cambridge. The MS. was entrusted to Albert Way, who says that it proved of no slight advantage to him in his undertaking. The Commentarius consists of six leaves; it is written in double columns, in a small neat hand of the thirteenth century, with marginal explanations and interlinear glosses by a second scribe in paler ink. It commences,—'Commentarius liber iste curialium personarum et rerum et vocabulorum preorditur,' and ends as follows,—'Hec edita sunt parysius sub venerabili cancellario parysius Galtero de Castello Theodorici, anno domini M°. CC°. 40°. sexto gloriosum et admirabilem partum beate Marie Virginis demonstrante.' As Way observes, if this tract, written in the style and manner of the Dictionarius of de Garlandia can be recognized with certainty as from his pen, this colophon and date at its close supply fresh and conclusive evidence in regard to the question of the period when he wrote, and agree with the circumstances in regard to his work 'de Mysteriis ecclesie' and its dedication to Fulke, Bishop of London. The text of the Commentarius is full of French words explanatory of Latin terms of which a considerable portion are found scattered through the pages of the Promptorium.

7. Libellus misteriorum qui dicitur Anglia que fulget (quo fulget, Winch. MS.).—Among works attributed to Johannes de Garlandia a treatise is mentioned by Bale, p. 153, on the authority of Bostonus Buriensis entitled, 'Mysteriorum Ecclesiae. Anglia quo tendis.' A copy of a metrical treatise with a similar title but commencing 'Anglia quo fulget' may be found in Cott. MS. Claudius concluding thus: 'Lucida terribulum redolem campana sonora'; and there is also a copy in a collection of grammatical tracts, chiefly by de Garlandia, in Caius College Library, Cambridge. The prefatory lines (as read by Way) begin thus :—

> 'Anglia quo fulget, quo gaudent presule claro
> Londonie, quo parisius scrutante sophiam
> Florebat studium, basis aurea fulgide Fulco,
> Firme justicie misteria suscipe sacre,
> Cuncte studio distincta metroque Johannis.'

In the margin is written: 'Domino F. episcopo London. Magister J. de Karlandia (sic) seipsum et opus suum de misteriis ecclesie.' There are interlinear glosses as well as marginal comments by a later hand; over basis aurea in the third line is to be read 'alludit nomini suo,' namely Basset, the surname of the bishop. This work is a mystical explanation in hexameter verses of rites of the church, vestments, &c.

8. Merarius.—In the volume of grammatical tracts mostly attributed to Johannes de Garlandia, preserved in the library at Caius College, Cambridge, is a short tract with an elaborate gloss. A second copy is also found in the same library, following the tract entitled Distigius. According to Way it commences thus, —'Merarii nuper cintillanti jubare pannidensi rejecta diployde macellam ex bisso subuculam cum recino duntaxat influo oloserico.' The gloss or commentary gives the following explanation of the title of the work. 'Merarii, etc. Hec meraria et hec merenda est comestio qui manducatur in meridie.' So in the Nominale (Wright's Vocabularies, vol. i, p. 240) we find : 'Hoc merarium, a mid-dyner, under-mete,' and in the Ortus Vocabulorum 'Merarius i. meridianus.—Merarius est quidem liber.' The title of the treatise was doubtless intended to refer to the timely nourishment dispensed in the heat of midday.

9. Distigius.—In one of the volumes in the library of Caius College, Cambridge, there is found among grammatical writings by Johannes de Garlandia and other writers a treatise consisting of 42 hexameter lines thus entitled,—'Opus istud dicitur Distigium, a dia, duo, et stigos, versus, quia in duobus versibus comprehendet autor totam sentenciam proverbialem.' So that the word distigium is simply a form of the Greek δίστιχον, our 'distich.' There are a few interlinear explanations with a voluminous gloss in Latin. It begins thus, 'Cespitat (Anglice, stumlyt) in phaleris ippus (i. equus) blattaque (i. purpura) supinus (i. superbus).' The MS. is probably of the close of the thirteenth century. There exist other MSS. of this text. The text, with numerous English glosses, taken from Harl. MS. 1002, has been printed in Wright's Vocabularies, vol. i, p. 175. At the end is written 'explicit liber equus caballus,' and hence it may be conjectured that Distigius is the same treatise as that cited in the Promptorium as 'liber equi'; see 'Leterone' in Way's edition, where we find a Latin term for a lectern or desk, discus, given as 'secundum li. equi.' For this additional gloss Way cites Pynson as the authority. This curious vocabulary contains a considerable proportion of words adopted from the Greek.[1]

10. Robertus Kylwarbi.—Robert Kilwardby was a native of England, educated at the University of Paris and probably at Oxford. He became Provincial of the Dominican Order in England; was nominated Archbishop of Canterbury in 1272; resigned the see on being made cardinal-bishop of Porto and Santa Rufina by Nicholas III in 1278; and died shortly after at Viterbo, as it was alleged, by poison. Among his numerous works enumerated by Pits and Tanner there are several grammatical and other treatises which may have supplied materials to the compiler of the Promptorium, such as the 'Tractatus de ortu scientiarum,' of which copies exist in the British Museum, in the college libraries of Merton and Balliol, and elsewhere. He wrote commentaries on Priscian's treatise 'De Constructione,' on Donatus, and on various works of Aristotle. One evil work he did for which he can never be forgiven. He removed all the registers and judicial records of Canterbury on his departure from England—and they have thus been irreparably lost to posterity!

[1] It should be noticed that there was an author of English origin, named Johannes Destigius, mentioned by Pits, who wrote a work, 'Super Vocabulis Sacrorum Bibliorum.' In Bale we find, 'Joannes Destigio, et alius quidam Anglus, exemplo Alexandri Nequam (i. e. Neccham) scripserunt super Dictiones bibliorum.'

11. Alexander Neccham.—He was a native of Hertfordshire, born at or near St. Albans in the year 1157 on the same night as Richard I. His mother was chosen to be Richard's foster-mother, and she suckled both the children together. He pursued his studies in the schools of France and Italy, where his learning was held in high estimation. In 1215 he became Abbot of Cirencester; he died at Kempsey in Worcestershire in 1217, and was buried in Worcester. His principal works were theological. He compiled also a treatise 'De rerum naturis,' a 'Repertorium Vocabulorum,' an 'Elucidarium Bibliothecae,' explanatory of difficult words in the Scriptures; also a treatise entitled 'Isagoge ad Artes.' It is probably from the treatise 'De nominibus Utensilium' of Alexander Neccham that the compiler of the Promptorium derived a large number of Latin words. This work has been printed in Wright's Vocabularies (vol. i, pp. 96–119), from a Cotton MS. collated with two MSS. in the National Library in Paris. There is a copy in the library at Caius College, Cambridge, and another at St. John's College, Oxford.

The works enumerated in the foregoing list, as the principal authorities consulted by the compiler of the Promptorium, were not, however, the only sources from which the materials of his dictionary were derived. From the number of rare and valuable works referred to in Capgrave's Chronicle, it may be seen how extensive a store of learning must have been treasured up in the library of the Austin Friars at Lynn, and it is probable that the library of the neighbouring convent of the Dominicans was not less copiously provided.

The works of Aristotle are repeatedly cited (see 'Dysowre,' 'Dullarde,' and 'Telte'). Under 'Fyyrforke' and 'Prynce of preestys' there is doubtless a reference to the 'Historia Scholastica,' the popular work of Petrus Comestor (Pietro Mangiadore, so called because he was an insatiable devourer of books), dean of the cathedral of Troyes, and chancellor of the University of Paris (died in 1179). The 'Historia Scholastica' consists mainly of a compilation of the historical portions of the Bible; it was the greatest authority on the subject in the Middle Ages. Dante places Petrus Comestor among the doctors of the Church in the Heavens of the Sun (see Toynbee's Dictionary of Dante, p. 434). Under 'Gylle, lytyl potte' the 'Vitae Patrum' (translated by Caxton from the French, and printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1495) is given as the authority for the Latin words. Under 'Amuce' is found reference to the 'Horologium divine sapiencie.' This is probably the treatise with that title by the celebrated Dominican preacher of the fourteenth century, Henricus Suso, who died in 1365. This work was translated into French and English, and was printed by Caxton. Under 'Feest in holy chyrche' we find 'nota de agape in iure,' the reference being to the first part of the Decretum of Gratian, of which several printed editions exist. Under the same word 'Raymundus' is given as an authority, the reference being to the Summa by the Dominican Raimundus de Pennaforti (who died in 1275), the compiler of the Decretals. Under 'Swerd berare' and 'Schyppe, boote' we find reference to the Dialogues of Gregory the Great, of which there were several early translations. 'Boetius' is cited under 'Sokyng Grownd,' for the Latin word 'bibulus' (see Boethius, De Consolatione, ch. xii). Under 'Hunnyng' (or Hummynge,' Harl. MS.) we find 'Levsay' given as the authority for the Latin word. The same authority appears under 'Knaste,' 'Schryvyn,' and 'Trunchyn, worme.' The identification of 'Levsay' (or 'Levasey' has been sought in vain. Under 'Seet for worthy men, orcestra,' the authority given is 'Cunde,' according to Way's reading). The only author with this name that occurs in Bale is Laurentius Cunde, who wrote 'Magnum opus Anglico sermone,' in the reign of Edward III, and flourished A.D. 1350.

It may deserve notice that Galfridus gives, as English words, 'Caton' (doubtless the Disticha attributed to Dionysius Cata), 'Donet' (the grammar composed by Ælius Donatus in the fourth century), and 'Facet' (the supplement to the Disticha).

Manuscripts.

III. Way mentions and describes six MSS. of the work.

1. The Harleian MS. No. 221. This was selected by Way as the text of his edition. The book belonged originally to the library of Sir Symonds d'Ewes, the eminent scholar, the friend of Selden, Spelman, and Cotton. Way selected this valuable MS. for the groundwork of his edition, as supplying the earliest, most ample, and most correct text among the MSS. of the work which had come under his observation. It contains a much greater number of words than are found in any other MS., or in Pynson's and subsequent editions, in addition to which a synonym or explanatory phrase is frequently found in the Harl. MS., contributing to elucidate the signification of some archaism which in the other texts is comparatively obscure. In Way's Preface we find a detailed description of the MS., with a page in facsimile, and a minute account of peculiarities, contractions, &c.

2. Fragment of a copy in Harl. MS. 2274. From this MS. Way obtained a few various readings, which he indicated in each instance by the number of the MS. It contains portions of the letters G. H. M. N. and R.; and more nearly resembles the text of Pynson's edition than any of the other MSS.

3. MS. preserved in the library of King's College, Cambridge. Way indicated all various readings and additions obtained by collation of this MS. by the letter (K).

4. MS. in the Chapter Library, Winchester Cathedral, indicated in Way's edition by the letter (S). An account of this MS., the text of the present edition, has been given above.

5. MS. in the library of Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart (No. 8306, Heber Library, No. 1360). In this MS. y is used instead of þ. In Way's edition all various readings and additions obtained by collation of this MS. are indicated by the letter (H).

6. MS. in the British Museum, Addit. MS. 22556. It is incomplete; it was unknown to Way until a great portion of his edition had been printed off. The various readings obtained by Way from this MS. are indicated by him by the letter (A).

Editions.

We will now notice the editions issued by Pynson, Wynkyn de Worde, and Julian Notary.

The edition by Richard Pynson in 1499 is one of the most scarce productions of his press; probably he may have reprinted in subsequent years a volume which must have proved so extensively acceptable; no other impression of it, however, by that printer, who industriously prosecuted his art until 1529, is known to exist. A minute account of this rare volume may be found in Ames's Typographical Antiquities, vol. i, p. 246. Way tells us that he had only seen five copies, of which one is in the British Museum, one in the Bodleian, and a third in the Cambridge University Library. It was printed 'in expensis virtuosorum virorum Fredrici egmondt et Petri.' Of these two patrons the former was possibly Frederic, son of William IV, Count of Egmont, a distinguished person of that family. But Way thinks it more probable that these patrons were either merchants or booksellers, and that the work was printed for them as a trade speculation.

The numerous various readings and additions both of English and Latin words obtained from Pynson's edition are indicated by Way by the initial (P).

Several editions of the Promptorium issued from the press of Wynkyn de Worde in small quarto form. Copies in good condition are scarcely less rare than those printed by Pynson. A copy of that of 1516, formerly in Heber's library, and obtained by Sir Frederic Madden in 1836, was entrusted for Way's use during the preparation of his edition. A detailed bibliographical notice of this rare book is given in Ames's Typographical Antiquities by Herbert, vol. iii, p. 1775. Way obtained a few various readings from this edition of Wynkyn de Worde which he indicated by the initial (W).

In 1508 Julian Notary printed the Promptorium in small quarto. A single copy is known, preserved now in the British Museum. It came from the library of Mr. Thomas Grenville, who entrusted it to Way; the few various readings from this book are indicated by the initial (J). The text appears to follow that given by Wynkyn de Worde. A fragment of this rare edition is noticed by Maitland in his list of early printed books in the Lambeth Library (1843), p. 464.

PROMPTORIUM PARVULORUM.

EXPLICIT PROMPTORIUM PARUULORUM.

NOTES.

1. A-bochement, an addition, a 'make-up.' 'Augmentum, adaugma: a-bocchement,' Medulla (Way). Cp. Boch, 36. See Mekkyng, 284. Col. 4.

2. A-ceth, satisfaction. 'Yit never shal make his richesse Asseth unto his gredynesse,' R. Rose 5600. 'Pilat willynge to make aseeth,' Wyclif Mark xv. 15. Cp. P. Plowman, C, xx. 203. See Makyn a-seth, 297. [OF. aset, asset; PLat. ad satis. Cp. E. assets from OF. assez.] 5.

3. Ache, the smallage or wild celery, also applied to parsley. 'Apium: ache,' Voc. 554. 6. [F. 'ache: the herb smallage,' Cotgrave; Lat. apium, parsley; Gr. ἄπιον.]

4. A-cyde or a-sydnand. A-sydnand is for asiden-hand. 'He took nat his ground so even in the front, butt somewhate a-sydenhande,' Arriv. Edw. IV. (NED. s.v. asiden).

5. A-cloyd, lamed. See Acloyn, 20. [Lat. Gl. Inclinatus, error for 'inclavatus,' Harl. (Way).]

6. A-comelyd, benumbed. 'Oure hondis ben aclumsid (v. r. acumblid),' Wyclif Jer. vi. 24. 'Acomeled' is used of a hand benumbed in W. de Biblesworth in Wright's Voc. i. 161. See Comelyd, 92. [F. acombler, to load; Lat. accumulare.]

7. A-comeryd, encumbered, oppressed. 'Thorw wyn and thorw women There was Loth acombred,' P. Plowman, B, i. 32. 'His sheep acombred (v. r. encombred) in the myre,' Chaucer C. T. Prol. 508. [F. encombrer (Cotgrave).]

8. Affadyl, Asphodel or King's Spear. 'An Affodylle: Affodillus,' Cath. Angl. 'This herbe (Asphodelus) is called in English also Affodyl and Daffodyll,' Lyte (NED. s. v. daffodil). [Lat. asphodilus, asphodelus; Gr. ἀσφόδελος.] 6.

9. Affyste, i. e. a fyste. See Ffyyste, 162.

10. A-forn, in front, before. 'Boþe byhynde and aforn,' Leg. Rood (NED.). 'No such as hath ben here Aforn,' R. Rose 3952. [OE. onforan, in front.]

11. A-fornand for afornhand; cp. aforehand, Mark xiv. 8 (AV.).

12. A-fray, fright, alarm. 'And on the day for this afray I dye,' Chaucer M.P. vii. 334. 'Full of ghastly fright and cold affray,' Spenser F.Q. I. iii. 12. [AF. afray, agitation (Bozon); cp. mod. F. effroi.]

13. A-gase, Agatha. 'Agas,' Harl. (Way). 'Agas-Day, Agatha's Day. See the Paston Letters, iv. 426' (Halliwell).

14. Ageyn-byer, redeemer. 'Y woot that myn a3enbiere lyueth,' Wyclif Job xix. 25. See Geyn byyng, 205. 7.

Col. 7. 15. Aglot, the metal tag or point of a lace. 'An aglet to lace wyth alle,' Harl. (Way). 'He made hys pen of the aglet of a poynte that he plucked from hys hose,' Latimer (NED.). [OF. aguillete; see Hatzfeld.]

8. 16. Aggregyd, made heavy. In Wyclif Job xxiii. 2, 'the hond of my wounde is agreggid' is the rendering of 'manus plagae meae aggravata est' (Vulg.). [OF. agregier; PLat. aggreviare.]

17. Akyr, a strong current in the sea. Way has the following note: 'The MS. Poem entitled Of Knyghthode and Batayle, Cott. MS., commending the skill of mariners in judging of the signs of the weather, makes the following allusion to the aker:

"Wel know they the remue yf it a-ryse,
An aker is it clept, I vnderstonde,
Whos myght there may no shippe or wynd wyt stonde.
This remue in th' occian of propre kynde
Wyt oute wynde hathe his commotioun."'

'Acker, a ripple on the water' (Craven Dial.). See Jamieson (s. v. aiker).

18. A-lange, strange, foreign. 'In time of winter alange it is,' Arthur and Merlin (NED.). The word is a variant of elenge, remote, lonely, dreary, miserable. [OE. élenge, lengthy. It still survives in southern dialects. So in Sussex, ''Tis a terrible ellynge, lonesome old house,' Parish.]

19. Alblast, a cross-bow. 'Both alblast and many a bow,' Minot (Halliwell). 'Myd bowe & arblaste,' R. Glouc. 377. [OF. arbaleste; Late Lat. arcuballista; see Hatzfeld.]

679. ffacet. 'Faceet,' Harl. The book intended here is the famous educational work, Liber Faceti morosi, docens mores hominum, printed at Daventry by Jacobus de Breda, 1494. The book is mentioned by Rabelais (I. xiv) in the chapter which tells us how Gargantua was instructed in Latin literature: 'Puis luy leut Donat, le Facet, Theodolet et Alanus "in parabolis."' It was a popular supplement to Cato's Disticha, written in Leonine verse. It was also called 'Cato Parvus' or 'Cato Minor,' and 'Urbanus.' It is supposed by some to have been written by Daniel Ecclesiensis, an officer at the court of Henry II, about the year 1180. It was translated into English by Benet Burghe. See Way (p. 562).

680. ffacund, eloquence. 'And of facound fairest with a fre speche,' Destr. of Troy, 3791. 'Of eloquence was never founde So swete a sowninge facounde,' Chaucer M. P. iii. 926. 'Whose facounde Above all other is eloquent,' Gower, iii. 85. [OF. faconde; Lat. facundia.]

711. ffeer. [Syn. ferdnesse. 'ferdenesse,' Harl., fear, terror. See M. & S. 'Thurgh þe ferdnes þat he sal tak,' Hampole P. C. 2231. Wyclif uses the word ferdful, cp. Apoc. xxi. 8. 'To ferdful men . . . the part of hem shal be in the pool.' The phrase 'for ferd(e)' is very common; cp. Chaucer, 'Why sholde than for ferd thyn herte quake?' Tr. & Cr. iv. 607. Icel. ferð, travel; see Kluge (s. v. gefahr).]

712. ffeersyd. 'Fercehede,' Harl., fierceness. [From feers (fierce) + -hede (-head).]

713. fferyal. The proper sense of Lat. feria is a festival, a holyday. Besides this, however, the word has been used in a special sense in the Church from very early times to denote the days of the week (so in the Prompt. 'Werkday : fferia'). Monday, Tuesday, &c. were denoted as feria secunda, tertia, &c. The real feria was Sunday, and the other days of the week were reckoned with reference to this. In MLat. feriales dies were ordinary weekdays. The name Feriales was also applied to the books which contained a record of the feriae (festivals) of the martyrs. See Dict. Ch. Antiq. (s. vv. feria, feriales).

714. ffermyr. 'Fermerye,' Harl., an infirmary. See M. & S. 'Hoc valitudinarium : a fermery,' Voc. 722. 9. 'A Fermory : infirmarium, infirmatorium, misocomium (for nosocomium), valitudinarium,' Cath. Angl. 'If ȝe fare so in ȝowre fermorie,' P. Plowman, B, xiii. 108. [OF. enfermerie; Eccles. Lat. infirmaria, a place for the infirm (Ducange).]

728. ffyyste, a bad smell. See PALSGRAVE. [Cp. G. fist. Cognate with Lat. pēdo.]

729. ffyttyn or lesyng. 'Fytōn,' Harl. 'Fytyn,' Py., falsehood. 'Fytten: mensonge, menterie,' PALSGRAVE. 'He doth feed you with fittons, figments, and leasings,' Cynth. Revels (NARES). 'To tell a fittone in your landlord's ears,' GASCOYNE (ib.). 'In many other places he useth to fitton, and to write devises of his own head,' NORTH'S Plutarch, p. 1016. The word was once used in Wiltshire in the sense of pretence; see DARTNELL (s. v. fitten). [I would suggest that fyton (mendacium) is the same word as fyton or phyton = Lat. pythonem; cp. Vulgate 'mulierem habentem pythonem,' 1 Sam. xxviii. 7, and 'puellum quandam habentem spiritum pythonem,' Acts xvi. 16. For the metathesis cp. Phitones = Pythoness in BARBOUR, iv. 753 (see note), and Phitoun = the Python of Apollo, CHAUCER C. T. H. 109. In the Medulla I find the following interesting entry: 'Fiton, nomen serpentis, divinator, scientia divinandi nigromanci.' Cp. DUCANGE (s. v. phitones).]

163. 730. ffyle. 'Fythil,' Harl., a fiddle. 'Vitula: a fythele,' Voc. 619. 45.

'Hec uiella: fythylle,' Voc. 667. 4. 'His fithel was untempred,' P. Plowman, B, ix. 102. [OE. fiðele.] Col. 163.

731. fflagge, a sod, or piece of earth lifted with the grass growing on it. 'In Norfolk, according to Kennett, Ray, and Forby, the upper turf, pared off to serve as fuel, is termed flags or flaks,' Way. [Icel. flag.]

732. fflayn or fflawne, flayed. See M. & S. (s. v. flen). 'I would he were flayn,' Towneley M. (Mätzner). [Cp. OE. (be)flagen (Sievers, § 392), pp. of flēan, to flay.]

733. ffloke. 'Flake,' Harl., a flake. K. adds 'or hame.' See Hame, 213.

734. fflakette, a bottle. 'A Flaket: flacta, obba, uter,' Cath. Angl. 'Remygius took hym a flaket ful of holy wyne,' Trevisa, v. 293. 'Two flaketes ful of ful fin wynes,' W. of Palerne, 1888. 'Flacta, anglicè a flakette,' Ortus.

735. fflasch, a pond. 'I sal be like in flosche falland,' Surtees Ps. xxviii. 1. In Wars Alex. 2049 there occurs the word flosshez (pools). Cp. Halliwell (s. v. flosche). 'Flash, a sheet of shallow water,' Peacock. [OF. flache, flace, 'creux où l'eau s'amasse, flaque; du lat. flaccus devenu flac et au fém. flache' (Hatzfeld). 'Flachia. Locus aquis stagnantibus oppletus, nostris flache, flesque,' Ducange.]

736. fflagge, dry soil with the grass, a glebe. See Jamieson, Ray, Cocker cited in Moor. See fflagge (above).

737. fflawne, the name of a dainty dish for which there were many recipes. For some of these recipes, and for the various forms of the word, see Cookery Books (E.E.T.S. 91), glossary (s. v. flathons). See M. & S. (s. v. flaun). 'Bred and chese, butere and milk, Pastees and flaunes,' Havelok, 644. 'Of mylke and of egges men make flawnes (flans),' Caxton (Way). [OF. flaon (mod. flan); MLat. fladonem (from OHG. flado); cp. It. 'fiadone, a honey-comb, a flaune' (Florio); see Kluge (s. v. fladen).]

738. fflay written for fflaþ, a name for the fish usually called the Ray. 'Harrison, in his Description of England, uses the name flath as denoting the ray or scate,' Way.

739. fflegge, flag, sedge. 'A Flag, a weede: ulva,' Manip. 164.

740. ffleccher, a maker of bows and arrows. 'fferrers, flecchours, fele men of crafte,' Dest. Troy, 1593. 'A Fletcher: flectarius,' Cath. Angl. 'Her mind runs sure upon a fletcher or a bowyer,' Old Play (Nares). 'Artillier: a Bowyer or a Bow-maker; also, a Fletcher; or one that makes both bowes and arrows,' Cotgrave. Hence the surname; see Bardsley, p. 226. [AF. flechier, deriv. of fleche, an arrow ('flèche désigne la tige par opposition au fer et aux ailerons de la flèche; puis, par extension de sens flèche a remplacé saiete,' Hatzfeld].

741. ffleke. 'Fleyke,' Harl., a hurdle. See Way, Mätzner. 'A Fleke: cratis, craticula,' Cath. Angl. 'Fleak, a hurdle,' Jackson. 'Brëad-flake, a hurdle on which oat-cakes are dried'; see Wright Windhill Gram. § 312. 5. 'A fleak: crates,' Coles. 'Flake (also fleak), a fence-hurdle,' Peacock. [Icel. fleki, a hurdle.]

742. fflayle. We have four distinct articles devoted to the flail, one to the implement as a whole, and one to each of the three separate parts, namely, the part held in the hand (the staff), the part which beats the corn (the swingle), and the part which connects the staff and the swingle (the cap). 'Cappe of a flayle: liasse dun flaiau,' Palsgrave, 203. [OF. flaiel (mod. fléau); Lat. flagellum; see Hatzfeld.]

743. fflete. 'Flet,' Harl. 'Flett,' Py., skimmed or 'fleeted.' In Suffolk 165.

Col. 165. cheese made of skimmed milk is called flet-cheese; see Moor. See Johnson (s. v. flet). See ffletyn, 181. [OE. (Angl.) flét, cream, curds, also flēte, WS. flýte, fliete; cp. Icel. flautir, skimmed milk.]

745. fflewme, compleccione. 'Flewme of compleccyon,' K., phlegm, one of the four 'humours,' the combination of which forms the 'complexion' or 'temperament' of a man. See Trench (s. v. humour). 'A Mans Complexion of which there are commonly reckon'd four kinds, viz. the Cholerick, the Phlegmatic, the Sanguine and the Melancholy,' Tryon (NED.).

'The water which is moist and colde,
Maketh fleume, Which is manifolde,
Foryetel. slow and wery sone
Of every thing.' Gower, iii. 99.

[OF. fleume; Lat. phlegma; Gr. φλέγμα, heat.]

746. fflewme idem quod fflew, phlegm; see above. ['In John Russell's Boke of Nurture, 776, we have "a flewische countenance" given as the sign of the phlegmatic temperament'; see Skeat's note to Chaucer C. T. 625 (ed. 1886). 'Fluish: Aqueus, languidus,' Coles.]

747. fflygge as byrdis, able to fly. Flygge is the same word as fledge in fledgeling, the form flygge being northern and fledge southern and (particularly) Kentish. 'Flygge as byrdes be: plumeu,' Palsgrave, 312. 'Margaret Paston in a letter to her husband in 1460, describing the vain hopes excited among the partizans of Henry VI, says: "Now he and alle his olde felaweship put owt their fynnes, and arn ryght flygge and mery, hoping alle thyng is and schalbe as they wole haue it,"' Way. 'Kill bad chickins in the tread, Fligge they hardly can be catch'd,' Southwell (Nares). Cp. Peacock (s. v. bare-bub): 'The names boys give to young birds are bare-bubs. pen-feather'd uns, flig'd uns, and flig'd flyers.' 'Flig. fledge,' Wright Windhill Gram. § 315. e. [OE. flycge, cp. OHG. flucchi, Germanic type fluggja-; cognate with OE. flēogan, to fly.]

748. fflyke, a flitch of bacon. 'Tak the larde of a swyne flyk,' MS. (Halliwell). 'Flick, a flitch, either of bacon, or of sawn plank,' Forby. 'Flick, a flitch of bacon,' Peacock. 'Flick, the flank of a hog,' Moor. 'Flik, flitch of bacon,' Wright Windhill Gram. [Icel. flikki; cp. OE. flicce.]

749. fflyx, the flux, dysentery. See Bible Gloss. 'Dysenterie: the bloudie flix,' Cotgrave. 'The father of Publius laye sicke of a fiever and of a bluddy flixe [so AV. ed. 1611],' Tindale Acts xxviii. 8. 'What with the burning feaver and the flixe, Of sixtie men there scant returned sixe,' Harington Ariosto, xxxiii. 13. 'But George... gave him a bloody flix,' St. George (Percy, ii. 332). 'The Flixe or laske: Flúxo de vientre, Desentéria' (Minsheu).

166. 750. fflotys. 'Flotyse or flotyce,' Harl., froth, scum. See M. & S. 'As a fornes ful of flot, þat upon fyr boyles,' Allit. P. 1011. [Icel. flot, the fat, grease, esp. from cooked meat.]

751. fflote-gresse, grass growing in swampy ground, float-grass. 'The word belongs to the Devon dialect,' Halliwell. [Cp. G. flottgras, Du. vlotgras, Sw. flotagräs.]

752. fflowte, a flute. 'And many floute and lilting-horne,' Chaucer Hous of F. 1223. [OF. flaüte, cp. MHG. floite. See fflowtyn, 182. For 'gew-gaw' see Gwgaw, 203.]

980. Harneys, raiment. 'She dude off hir harnes & come & laye downe by him,' Gesta Rom. (Mätzner). 215.

981. Harneys, armour. 'Let not him that putteth on the harnes make his boast,' Coverdale 1 Kings xx. 11. 'He taketh from him his harnes wherein he trusted,' Tindale Luke xi. 22. 'And all about the courtly stable Bright-harness'd angels sit in order serviceable,' Milton Ode Nat. [OF. harneis, armour.]

982. Harsk or haske, harsh, astringent. 'Ask, dry, rough, harsh,' Wright Windhill Grammar. 'Hask, roughened, dried up . . . A hask wind is keen and parching,' Heslop. [Dan. harsk, rancid.]

983. Hassok, Harl. 'Hassock, coarse grass growing in rank tufts in boggy ground,' Forby. 'And that hassocks should be gotten in the fen, and laid at the foot of the said bank in several places where need requirèd,' Dugdale (Halliwell). 'Hassock, a thick and large tuft of coarse grass,' Peacock.

984. Hastybyr. 'Hastybere,' Harl., 'a kind of "barley" termed "hasty" from its being early, and coming to maturity in the third month after it is sown,' Way. [OE. bere, barley. Lat. Gl. 'Trimestris, genus ordei,' Ortus; so Medulla.]

985. Hastlere, one who roasts meat. 'þis hasteler, pasteler, and potagere,' Lib. Cur. Coc. (Mätzner). [Cp. Ducange: 'Hasta, veru, vernaculè Haste. Icellui de la Ronce prist un Haste ou broche de fer.' 'Hastator, Assarius coquus, Gall. Rotisseur, Cuisinier.' 986. Hatyr, rent cloth; the word commonly means clothing in general. 'Sche strypyd of hur hatere,' MS. Cantab. (Halliwell). [OE. hæteru, garments.]

987. Havre. 'Havure,' Harl. 'Havour or werdly good,' K., farm-stock, cattle, property; in dialect use, a horse used for heavy work; see NED. (s. v. aver). 'Muchelle haver of worldely goodis,' Hampole (NED.). '(Love is) Havoir withoute possessioun,' R. Rose, 4720. 'A man of some hauor and substaunce,' More (NED.). [AF. avoir, possession; Lat. habēre, to have.]

988. Heke or hech, a half-door, wicket, a door divided across. 'an Heke: Antica,' Cath. Angl. 'An Heck: portella,' Manip. 'Good wyff, open the hek,' Towneley M. (Mätzner), p. 389. [Cp. Du. hek, rail, gate.]

989. Hedare. 'Hedare of hefdare,' Harl. 'Hevedare,' Heber. 'Behedar,' Pr., a headsman. 'A hangeman or an heeder is odiose to loke vpon,' Horman. See Hevedare, 221; Hedyn, 232. 217.

990. Heed broth. 'Heed borow,' Harl. 'Hedborwe,' K., a head-borough. 'Head borow, signifies him that is chief of the Frankpledge, and that had the principal government of them within his own pledge,' Blount. In the Stat. entitled Visus Franciplegii (18 Edw. II.) de tenenda leta, head-boroughs are called chiefs plegges; see Stat. of Realm, i. 246. [OE. borh, a security, pledge, also a person who gives security. In the Ancient Laws there was a system of mutual suretyship for good conduct. See Lappenberg History, Part vi. ch. 20. For the form broth = borh, cp. Cowth, 97.]

991. Heede, head. See M. & S. 'Thou shalt not swere bi thin heed,' Wyclif Matt. v. 36. [OE. héafod.]

Col. 217. 992. Heedlesse, headless. [Lat. Gl. 'Acephalus, sine capite,' Ducange; Gr. ἀκέφαλος.]

993. Heedwaschyng. [Lat. Gl. 'Capitilavium. Dominica Palmarum. Ordo Romanus: Dominica Indulgentiæ, quæ diversis vocabulis distinguitur, id est, Dies Palmarum, sive Florum, atque Ramorum, Osanna, Pascha petitum, sive Competentium et Capitilavium. Appellationis rationem exponit Isidorus: Vulgus autem ideo eundem diem Capitilavium vocat, qui tunc moris est lavandi capita infantum, qui ungendi sunt,' Ducange. See Cormac's Glossary (s. v. Caplat).]

994. Heedwarke, the headache. 'Ciphalus: the hede werke,' Ortus. 'Cephalia: hedwarke,' Medulla. 'Þe Hede warke: cephalia, cephalargia,' Cath. Angl. [OE. héafodwærc, pain in the head. See Werkynge, 523.]

996. Hey, high. OE. héh (Anglian), WS. héah. Heybenche. Cp. Deece, 124. [Lat. Gl. 'Orcestra dicebatur locus separatus in cena ubi nobiles sedebant,' Cath. (Way).]

997. Hayeste. Here there is apparently a jumbling together of two articles. Harl. has 'Heyeste, altissimus, supremus. Heyke, garment.' We should therefore read 'Heyke garment or huke.' 'Huque: An Huke or Dutch mantle,' Cotgrave. 'Heuke, a garment for a woman: surquayne, froc,' Palsgrave. 'Huke: surquanie, froc,' ib. 233. 'Levitonarius: an huke,' MS. (Way). 'In the Invent. of Sir John Fastolfe's wardrobe under the head of togæ is "Item j jagged huke of blakke sengle." . . . In King Ryence's challenge the heralds are described as attired in hewkes (Percy's Rel. iii. 26). Skelton mentions the "huke of Lyncole green" worn by Elinour Rumming. See further in Ducange and Roquefort,' Way. [OF. heuke, huke, huque; MLat. huca.]

998. Heynyng, a heightening. [Cp. Swed. höjna, to exalt (Rietz); see Stratmann. Go. (us-)háhnan, to be exalted.]

999. Heynceman. 'Henchemanne,' Heber, a page of honour in a court. Way gives authorities for the forms hensmen, henxmen, beside haunsmen, hanshmen. 'A hench-mán: Ephebus, ante ambulo,' Coles. 'Henchman: paige d'honneur, enfant d'honneur,' Palsgrave. 'A henchman or henchboy: page d'honneur qui marche devant quelque Seigneur de grand authorité,' Sherwood. [Lat. Gl. 'Gerolotista: a sompturman,' Voc. 586. 21.]

218. 1000. Heyward, the officer of the lord of the manor who looked after the cattle in the common pasture and prevented trespass on the cultivated ground. 'Agelarius: an haywcard,' Voc. 562. 22. 'Viridarius: a hayward or a Forster,' Voc. 619. 33. 'Hic inclusarius: a hayward,' Voc. 811. 40. 'A haward or hayward: Qui garde (en commun) tout le bestail d'un bourg ou bourgade,' Sherwood. 'Haywarden, an officer appointed at manorial courts, whose duties are now identical with those of the pinder,' Peacock. Hence the surnames 'Hayward' and 'Haward,' see Bardsley, p. 234. [OE. hægweard, a hedge-ward.]

1001. Hekele, a comb to dress flax. 'An Hekylle: mataxa,' Cath. Angl. 'an Heckle: pecten,' Manip. 'Mataxa: a hekyl,' Ortus.

1002. Hecfore, a heifer. 'Juuenca: an hekfer beest,' Ortus. 'Hec buccula, Hec juvenca: a hekfere,' Voc. 758. 3. 'A Heckfare: bucula, iuuenca,' Manip. [A contaminated form of OE. héahfore, a heifer.]

1003. Hele, health. 'An Helc: prosperitas, salus, sanitas, valitudo,' Cath.

Angl. 'Salus, anglicè hele,' Ortus. 'Myn hap, myn hele, and al my blisse,' Col. 218.
CHAUCER M. P. iii. 1039. [OE. hélu.]

1004. Helter, a halter. 'an Helter: capistrum,' Cath. Angl. 'an Halter, anything that one is snarled or tied withall, a ginne, a snare,' BARET. [OE. hælfter; cp. G. halfter.]

1005. Hengyl, a small hinge. 'Hic gumser: a hengylle,' Voc. 779. 3. 'An 219.
Hingel: cardo,' Manip. [Deriv. of OE. henge, a hinge.]

1006. Hengyl gemew. See Gymew, 191.

1007. Herberiowre. Here there has been a jumbling of two articles as we see from Harl. We should read 'Herberiowre: Hospiciarius. Herberewe: Hospicium.' Herberiowre, a harbinger, one who prepared a place and lodging, a 'harbour' for another, then merely a forerunner. See TRENCH. 'Then came the herbariours, harageous knyghtez,' Morte Arthure (HALLIWELL). 'St. Julian the gode herberiour,' Bodley MS. (SKEAT, s.v. harbinger). 'The fame anon throughout the toun is born By herberiours that wenten him beforn,' CHAUCER C. T. 5417. [OF. herbergeur; deriv. of herbergier, to harbour or lodge any one; deriv. of herberge, lodging, dwelling; of Germ. origin, being identical with the word below.]

1008. Herberewe, a lodging, shelter, place of refuge. 'Holi cherche that herberwe is, and goddes hous to saue,' P. Plowman, B, x. 406. 'Aungels that weren resseyued to herborewe,' WYCLIF Heb. xiii. 2. [Icel. herbergi, lit. army-shelter.]

1009. Here-boond, a fillet. [Lat. Gl. 'Vitta, ligamen quo crincs religantur, anglicè a fylette,' Ortus.]

1010. Heers, a pyramidal frame for supporting lights used especially in the solemn services of Holy Week, also as a part of funeral display. 'A representation is given on the Roll or Brevis mortuorum of John Islyppe Abbot of Westm. who died 1522, and whose body was placed "undre a goodlye Hersse w^t^ manye lights"' (WAY). [OF. herce (MLat. hercia; Lat. hirpicem, a harrow. See SKEAT, and TRENCH (s. v. hearse).]

1011. Here. 'Herre,' Harl., a hinge. 'An Harre of a dore: cardo,' Cath. Angl. 'ȝit he hadde not maad erthe; and floodis, and the herris of the world,' WYCLIF Prov. viii. 26. 'ffor the lordis ere the herrys of the erth,' HAMPOLE, p. 502. [OE. heorr; cp. Icel. hjarri.]

1012. Hern-pan, the Skull or Brain-pan. 'Hoc cranium: a hernpane,' 220.
Voc. 746. 4. 'Hanapel: hernepane,' W. DE BIBLESWORTH, p. 144. 'Hurtles his herne-pane,' Morte Arthure (HALLIWELL). 'an Harne panne: cranium,' Cath. Angl. 'Harn-pan, brain-pan,' HESLOP.

1013. Hernys or harneys, the Brains. 'Þe Harnes: cerebrum,' Cath. Angl. 'And of hys hede he brake the bone, The harnes lay uppon the stone,' MS. Harl. (HALLIWELL). 'Harnes, the brains,' JAMIESON. [Icel. hjarni; cp. Go. hwairnei.]

1014. Herowd of armys, a herald. See M. & S. (s. v. herauld). 'An heraud on a scaffold made an ho,' CHAUCER C. T. 2533. 'Harowdes of armes than they wente,' Eglamour, 1177. [OF. heraut, MLat. heraldus.]

1015. Herth stok, a 'hearth-stock,' a large log against which, as a support, the fire was piled. See Kynlyn, 248. [Lat. Gl. 'Repofocilium: an herthe stok or a skrene,' MS. (WAY). 'Rcpofocilium, illud quod tegit ignem in nocte; super quod a posteriori parte foci ligna ponuntur, quod vulgo "lander" dicitur,' Gloss. in DUCANGE.]

1016. Herthys lepre, the skin of a hart. [Lat. Gl. 'Nebris the skin of

Col. 220. a deer,' Coles; Gr. νεβρίς, a fawn-skin worn by the Bacchanals at the Bacchic festivals.]

1017. Hertys tong, the plant called Hart's tongue. 'Herba cervi, scolopendria, lingua ceruina idem, gallicè cerflange, anglicè hertestonge,' Alphita. [Lat. Gl. 'scolopendria, lingua ceruina, herba cerui idem, gallicè cerlaunge, anglicè hertestonge,' Alphita.]

1018. Hervest, autumn. 'Harvest: Autumpnus, messis,' Cath. Angl. [OE. hærfest. 'Aestas et autumnus: sumor and hærfest,' Voc. 176. 15. 'Autumnus: hærfest,' Voc. 176. 9.]

1019. Hesyl tre, the tree called the Hazel. 'An Heselle: corulus; an Heselle buske: coruletum,' Cath. Angl. 'Hec corulus: a hesyltre,' Voc. 715. 23. [OE. hæsel.]

1020. Hesp of þrede, a hasp, the fourth part of a spindle. 'Hesp, Hasp, a hank of yarn. To make a ravell'd hesp, to put a thing in confusion; to redd a ravell'd hesp, to restore order,' Jamieson. [Icel. hespa, a wisp or skein (of wool).]

1021. Hesp of a dore, a hasp fastening a door. 'Hoc pesulum: a hespe,' Voc. 778. 24. [Icel. hespa. Lat. Gl. 'Hoc pessulum: dorebar,' Voc. 667. 40.]

221. 1022. Hevedare, a headsman. See M. & S. (s. v. heued). See Hedare, 217.

1023. Hevyng. 'Hewynge,' Harl.

1024. Hevke. See Hayeste, 217 (note).

222. 1025. Hydows. See Wundyre grete, 537.

1026. Hyldyr [or eldyr, Harl.]. 'Hillern tre,' K. 'Ellorne tre,' Py., the Elder tree. 'Hilder, the elder. Norfolk,' Halliwell. 'In some parts of England the name hilder is still in use,' Way. See Eld, 144.

223. 1027. Hyppyng or haltyng. ME. hyppen, generally means to hop. '(They) that hippe aboute in Engelonde,' P. Plowman, B, xv. 557. 'And nat in Engelonde to huppe abowte,' ib. C, xviii. 279. So in northern dialects. 'Hippin-stones, stepping-stones across a stream. To hip is to hop,' Heslop. 'Hip, to hop on one foot,' Brockett. [With ME. huppen (hippen) cp. G. hüpfen from a Germ. type huppjan; see Brugmann, § 530.]

1028. Hyrdys or herdys of flex or hempe, the refuse of flax or hemp. 'Hardes (v. r. Hardys): stuppa, stupa,' Cath. Angl. 'As a deed sparcle of bonys, ether of herdis of flex,' Wyclif Is. i. 31. 'Herdis of hemp or flaxe,' Wyclif (1382) Dan. iii. 46. 'Hards (1) worked fibre of flax or hemp, (2) the refuse of the same,' Peacock. [OE. heordas, hards of flax, tow; a cognate of Icel. haddr, hair; cp. Brugmann, § 596.]

1029. Hyrne, a corner. 'An Hyrn: Angulus,' Cath. Angl. 'Laborintus is an hous wonderliche i. buld wiþ halkes and hernes,' Trevisa, i. 313. 'The stane that the edifiand reprouyd here it is made in heuyd of hyrne (in caput anguli),' Hampole Ps. cxvii. 21. [OE. hyrne.]

1030. Hobehawk, a very small kind of hawk. 'Hobyhauke: alaudarius,' Huloet (so Manip.). 'The hawke called a hobby: Alouëttier, Hobreau, haubereau, aubereau, obereau,' Sherwood. 'An Hoby: alaudarius,' Cath. Angl. 'Love thinketh . . . the lark that breedeth in the ground to be better then the hobby that mounteth to the clouds,' Euphues (Nares). [OF. hobe, a small hawk that only swoops down upon little birds; F. hobin (aubin), a little horse; see Hatzfeld.]

1031. Husch, a hutch, chest, ark. 'Hutche or whyche,' Harl. 'Hoche or hutche,' Py. 'Archa: a huche,' Medulla. 'Rise lord in til thi rest: thou and the huche (arca) of thi halighynge,' Hampole Ps. cxxxi. 8. Cp. 'þou & þe houche of halwing,' E. E. Psalter. 'Tyl Pernelles purfil be put in here hucche,' P. Plowman, B, iv. 116. 'That arke or hucche with the relikes Tytus ledde with hym to Rome,' Maundeville (Mätzner). 'Hutche or cofer, called in the northe contrey an arke,' Huloet. 'An Hutche: thesaurarium,' Manip. 'Hutche a chest: huche,' Palsgrave. [OF. huche; PLat. hūtica. Syn. 'whyche,' Harl., a chest, a locker. 'And Purneles porfil be put in the whucche,' P. Plowman, C, v. 111. For 'wheche,' chest, see English Wills (E.E.T.S. 78); 'whiche' occurs in Halliwell. 'Which, an ark or chest,' Bailey. OE. hwicce, locker, chest, trunk.] Col. 223.

1032. Hole. Hol, K. Holow, Harl., concave (of vessels). Hol, hollow (of pipes or pierced things). 'Holle: cavus natura, concavus arte, inanis,' Cath. Angl. 'Cavus: holle,' Medulla. 'Cavea: a hol place,' ib. 'Canalis holle as rede,' ib. 'Hyr enyn were holket and holle,' Autors of A. (Mätzner). [OE. hol, hollow, Icel. holr. The Harl. 'Holow' is der. from the oblique cases of OE. hol.] 224.

1033. Hole or huske; Hole off pesyn, the hull, the outer covering of fruits, grain, &c. 'Fan owt þe holys (of wheat),' Cookery Books (E.E.T.S. 91). 'Rubbe hem (the peas) & þe holys wyl away,' ib. p. 32. 'So man coveitiþ to be fild wiþ þes peyse holes,' Wyclif (Mätzner). OE. hulu.

1034. Hole. 'Holle,' Py. the hull of a ship. 'Hec carina: a holle,' Voc. 804. 43. 'The gudes that thai robbed In holl gan thai it hide,' Minot (Skeat). [Cp. Du. 'het hol van een schip; the ship's hull' (Sewel).]

1035. Holyly halwyd places. 'Holy halwyd place,' Harl.

1036. Holme, a place beside water. 'Into þan hæȝe holme,' Laȝamon 20712. In Norfolk, and in the vicinity of Lynn, the name is frequent, and denotes both low pastures and elevations of trifling magnitude, but which were perhaps insulated before draining had been effected. 'Holm, low-lying land by the side of a stream which in time of flood may become more or less insular,' Atkinson. [Icel. holmr, a 'holm' islet, esp. in a bay, creek, lake or river; even meadows on the shore with ditches behind them are in Iceland called 'holms.']

1037. Holrysch. 'Holrysche or bulrysche,' Harl., a bulrush. 'This name seems to be derived from AS. hol, "cavus," and risc, "juncus": but as the scirpus lacustris (Linn.), commonly called bull-rush, has not a hollow but a spongy stem, the proper intention of the term is obscure,' Way. 225.

1038. Hooppe seed or flax. 'Hoppe, sede of flax,' Harl., linseed. 'Du lyn averet le boceaus (hoppen),' W. de Biblesworth, p. 156. The word hoppe was also used with reference to other plants: 'Apium est nomen herbe, anglicè ache or hoppe,' Ortus. 'Corna, fructus corni: hoppe; cornus quidam arbor: hoppe tre, ut quidam dicunt,' Geoffrey (Way).

1039. Hoppur off a seedleppe ('or a seedlepe,' Harl. 2), a vessel for holding seed. See Seedlepe 404. 'Vas cum quo seminatores seminant a sede-lepe or a hopere,' MS. Gloss. (notes to P. Plowman, p. 108). 'He heng an hoper on his bac in stude of a scrippe,' P. Plowman, A, vii. 57. 'Hec ferricapsa: a hopyr,' Voc. 725. 10. 'An hoppyr: farricapsa est molendini, saticulum satum, seminarium,' Cath. Angl.

1040. Horcop, a bastard. 'For, syr, he seyde, hyt were not feyre A horcop to be yowre heyre,' MS. Cantab. (Halliwell). 'Hic pelinguis: a horcoppe.' Voc. 694. 9. 'I gafe souke and noryshed my ij horecoppis,' Gesta Rom. p. 384 (Mätzner). [Deriv. of OE. hór, fornication.]

Col. 226. 1041. Horel, a fornicator. 'An Horrel: libidinosus,' Manip. 'Horrell or whoremonger: concubitor,' HULOET. [Syn. hollowr, 'hullowre,' Harl., holour, Py. See Hullour, 229.]

1042. Hornar. 'Hornare,' Harl., a maker of horns, a worker in horn. The art of working in horn was one in which the English were formerly much skilled. In 1464 the horners presented a petition to Parliament against strangers, who came 'to understond the konnyng, and feate of makyng of horns' (Rot. Parl. iv. 567; see WAY. 'Horner, a maker of hornes: cornettier. Horneresse, a woman: cornettiere,' PALSGRAVE. BARDSLEY (p. 393) says 'I need not remind my reader how many are the descendants of such a man as "Richard le Horner," but it may not equally have struck him how all-important would be his trade at such a period as this. That his chief manufacture was that of the musical horn I cannot doubt, so used as it was officially or ordinarily, at fair and festival, at dance and revelry. . . . Windows were commonly made of this material, frames were constructed of it, the child's horn-book being but a memory of this; lanterns were formed of it, cups of all sizes were fashioned from it, chessmen were manufactured out of it.'

1043. Horne stoke. Two articles are here mixed up together, as we may see from Harl.: 'Horone, herbe; Collocasia, marubium, prassa.'

1044. Horne stoke, 'Horn keke,' Harl. 'Hornkek or garfysshe,' Py., some kind of fish. 'Hec rugella, Hoc rustiforum: a hornkeke,' Voc. 765. 12 'Hec gamorus: hornekek,' Voc. 642. 19. 'Hornkecke, a fysshe lyke a mackerell,' PALSGRAVE. [Cp. OE. hornfisc, Icel. hornfiskr, a garfish or greenbone.]

'A Iole of fish: fauces,' Manip. 'Teste a teste: face to face, cheek by joul,' COTGRAVE. 'Jig-by-jowl, apparently a corruption of cheek-by-jowl,' FORBY. 'A woman need not be asham'd to sit jig by jowle with the best of the parish,' The Cheats (NARES). 'In the Master of Game mention occurs of the "iawle bone" of a wild boar,' WAY. [This word is identical with chawyl in Chawyl-bone, 78.]

241. 1113. Ionyowre (so Harl.). 'Ioynour,' Py., a joiner, a cabinet-maker. 'A Ionour: junctor, paginator,' Cath. Angl. 'Ioynar, a craftesman: menuisier,' PALSGRAVE.

1114. Ioppe or folte. See Iavel, 237. Cp. COTGRAVE: 'Iobelin: a sot, gull, doult, ass, cokes.' Ioppery or ffollery, foolery. Perhaps the words Ioppe, Ioppery, may be connected with Iape, Iaperie; see the quotations in MÄTZNER.

1115. Iorowre (also Iurowre, 243), a murmurer, whisperer. [Both the English and Latin words are evidently onomatopœias; the sound produced by some birds is termed 'jurring.' In a MS. Camb., among the noises of animals it is said that 'Colure ierist et cok chaunt: coluere iurrut and cok syngeþ'; see WAY. JAMIESON gives jurr as signifying the noise of water falling among loose stones.]

1116. Iorowry, a murmuring, whispering.

1117. Iowele, a jewel. [Lat. Gl. Clinodium is remarkable in this place as being due to the G. Kleinod, a jewel. This German word occurs also in Byzantine writers; Nicetas uses the word κλεινώδιον, see DUCANGE (s. v. clenodium: clinodium).]

1118. Ioyuncynge. 'Iowncynge,' Harl. 'Jounce, to bounce, thump, and jolt, as rough riders are wont to do,' FORBY. This seems to be the same word as Shakspere's jaunce: 'Spurred, galled and tired by jauncing Bolingbroke,' i.e. hard-riding B., Rich. II, v. 5. 94. 'I gawance a horse up and downe upon the stones, and make hym gambalde and flynge: Ie pourbondis. You gaunce your horse,' PALSGRAVE. [F. 'Jancer un cheval: to stirre a horse in the stable till he be swart with-all' (COTGRAVE).]

1119. Iowpe, a garment. 'The iupa appears to have been a long garment, worn by all classes, secular and religious, and both sexes,' WAY. 'Also he seten and sholde soupe, So comes a ladde in a ioupe,' Havelok, 1766. [OF. jupe, MLat. jupa; cp. MGr. ζοῦπα.]

1120. Iovwe or chekbon. 'Iowe,' Harl., jaw. 'Yvel thrift come on your Iowes,' CHAUCER Hous of F. 1786. [OF. joue, joe; Prov. gauta; It. gota.]

1121. Iows, juice. Ivce, 242. 'þe ious out he wrengis,' Wars Alex. 339. 'Iuce of herbes: succus,' Manip. 'Sucus: Iuys,' Voc. 614. 23. 'Succuticus: ful of juse,' Voc. 614. 22. 'Jus: juice, liquor, sap, pottage, broath,' COTGRAVE.

1122. Iowtys, pottage, broth. See M. & S. (s. v. joutes). 'Ioutes: lappates,' Cath. Angl. 'Ich was the prioresse potager, and other poure ladies, And made here ioutes of iangles,' P. Plowman, C, vii. 133. For a recipe of 'Ioutes' see Cookery Books (E.E.T.S. 91), p. 5 (see Glossary for many references). [OF. ioute, Metz Ps. xxxvi. 2; MLat. jūta (jutta); cp. Wel. uwd; OIrish ith.] Col. 241.

1123. Isyl off fyre, hot ashes or cinders. 'A Iselle: favilla, or a sperke,' Cath. Angl. 'Had sytten still, amang the assys cauld And lattyr isillys of thar kynd cuntre,' Douglas, x. 1. 125. 'We in Essex use Easles for the hot embers of straw only,' Ray. Cp. MS. in Halliwell, 'Make lee of haye ysels that was mawene byfor myssomer.' [OE. ysle, embers; MHG. üsele, cognate with Lat. us-tus, burnt.] 242.

1124. Issu, the entrails of a beast. 'In the Office of the Cellaresse of Barking the "yssues of the larder" are explained to be the hides, inwards, and tallow of oxen, &c.,' Way. 'In Stat. 12 Rich. II, c. 13, 1338, it is ordered that the "fymes et autres ordures des issues et entrailles sibien des bestes tuez, come des autres corrupcions" cast into the ditches shall be removed,' ib. [F. 'Les issuës d'une beste: the head and intrails of a beast' (Cotgrave).]

1125. Ivor or yvory, ivory. 'Thi necke is as a tour of yuer,' Wyclif Song of S. vii. 4. 'With golde and ivoure that so brighte schone,' Lydgate (Halliwell). 'And the ȝates of the palace ware of evour,' MS. Linc. (ib.) 'Howsis of euor, that is, chaste thoghtis,' Hampole Ps. xliv. 10. [AF. ivoire; cp. Prov. evori; Lat. eboreum, made of ivory; deriv. of ebur, ivory.]

1126. Iurdon, a chamber utensil. 'A Iordan: madula, urinale,' Cath. Angl. 'Madula: iordeyne,' Medulla (Mätzner). 'A jurden: matula. Matula: a chamber-pot,' Coles. 'Why, they will allow us ne'er a jordan,' Shaks. 1 Hen. IV, ii. 1. 22. In P. Plowman the word is used contemptuously of a person: 'I shal Iangle to this Iurdan (v. r. Iordan),' B, xiii. 83. The word is also used of a pot or vessel used by manufacturers, alchemists, and quacks; see Way. In the directions for preparing vermillion in a Sloane MS., one is bidden to 'take a good thick Iordan of glas,' to be used as a sort of crucible; see Way.

1127. Iwry, Jewry, where Jews dwell. 'Iurye: Iuda, iudaismus est ritus iudeorum,' Cath. Angl. 'Art thou that Daniel, one off the presoners of Juda whom my father the kynge brought out of Jewry?' Coverdale Dan. v. 13. 'In Jewrye is God knowne,' Great Bible (1539) Ps. lxxvi. 1. ['Dieux est cognuz en Iuerie,' Metz Ps.]

1128. Iuridiccion. 'Iurysdiction,' Harl.

1129. Iurney, a day's work. 'When here dener is don, and his daies iourne, Then may men wite what he is worth,' P. Plowman, C, xvii. 5. [F. 'Journée, a day, or whole day; also . . . a daies worke or labour; a daies journy, or travell' (Cotgrave); It. 'Giornáta, the work, the labour, the space, or the time of a day; a day's journey or travel, or day's labour; also, a set or foughten battle given in one day' (Florio); PLat. jornata for diurnata*. Lat. Gl. 'Dieta, diurnum spatium, opera diurna,' Ducange.] 243.

1130. Iuschel, a compound of eggs and grated bread with saffron and sage, boiled in broth (Way). For recipes for making Iusshell see Cookery Books (E.E.T.S. 91), p. 95 (for many references see Glossary). Iusshelle occurs often as the name of a dish in the Diet Roll of St. Swithun's, A.D. 1492; see Obed. Rolls, pp. 324, 325. 'Iussell, meate: minutal,' Manip. 'Ovilactum: Iussel,' Voc. 599. 31. [Lat. Gl. 'Iussellum, quidam cibus factus ex ovis et lacte: Iussell,' Voc. 590. 48. 'Iuscellum, confectum vino, ovis et sagimine,' Ducange.]

Col. 243. 1131. Iuste, a pot for measuring wine. 'Obba, quidam vas liquidorum, anglicè a iuste,' Medulla (Way). 'Obba, genus est calicis : a Juyste,' Voc. 598. 16. [Lat. Gl. 'Justa: olla monachi,' Ortus. 'Hec justa: a gyste,' Voc. 771. 34. 'According to Ducange the term "justa demesuralis" occurs in the signification of a certain measure by which wine was served to the monks,' Way. The word occurs in Obed. Rolls (see Glossary). Onoferum, cp. 'onophorum: a costrelle,' Voc. 624. 17 ; Lat. oenophorus ; Gr. οἰνοφόρος, a wine-cask.]

'In Arthur's dream, in the Morte Arthure we are told, l. 3258, that a duchess descended from the clouds "with kelle and with corenalle clenliche arrayede,"' C. 'The hare was of this damycell knit with ane buttoun in ane goldyn kell,' Douglas, vii. 41. 'Hoc reticulum: kelle,' Voc. 655. 16. 'Hoc craticulum: a kelle,' Voc. 735. 31. 'Kell, a dress for a woman's head, the hinder part of a woman's cap,' Jamieson.

1150. Kempstere, a comber of wool. 'Hec pectrix: a kempster,' Voc. 692. 25 ('a kemster,' Voc. 651. 22; 'a kembestere,' Voc. 601. 10). 'A kemster: pectinatrix,' Cath. Angl. Hence the modern surnames 'Kempster' and 'Kemster'; see Bardsley, p. 320.

1151. Kend. 'Keende,' Harl. 'Kynde,' Py., kind, race, nature. See M. & S. 'He nom kende of man,' Ayenbite, p. 189. [OE. (ge)cynd.]

1152. Kendly, after the course of 'kind.' See M. & S. 'Þe uirtues of kende, huerby som is kendeliche more þan oþer,' Ayenbite, p. 24.

1153. Kenette. 'Kenet,' Harl., the name of a smaller kind of dog that served to find the beast of chace. 'There ben also rennynge houndes, some lasse and some moor; and the lasse byn clepid kenettis,' Maystere of the Game, c. xiij (Way). 'Kenettys' are mentioned among the names of hounds in the Boke of Huntynge (ib.). 'A kenit: caniculus,' Cath. Angl. 'Hic caniculus: a kenet,' Voc. 699. 22. [AF. kenet, OF. chenet, whence MLat. chenetus, a kitchen fire-dog.]

1154. Ker, flat marshy land, overgrown with thistles or alders. 'Ker for aldyr: Alnetum,' Heber., Py. See Aleyr keyr, 8. 'John Crane of Norton Subcors, Norwich, bequeathed to his wife in 1484 "all the londs, merys, marysses, alder*kars*," Reg. Norwich. Camden in his Remains, under surnames explains car as signifying "a low waterie place, where alders do grow." Brockett gives carr, flat, marshy land, or a small lake. Leland in his description of the N. Riding says "there is a praty car or pole in Bishop's Dale." He speaks repeatedly of "low medowes, and morisch ground ful of carres." In Lord North's Household Book, 1512, a warrant is given for taking swans from the carre of Arrom,' Way. 'Carre (country word), woody, moist, and boggy ground,' Phillips. 'Car, a wood or grove on a moist soil, generally of alders,' Forby. 'Carr, a wood with a wet subsoil. An "alder-carr" is 247.

Col. 247. commonly heard of,' Moor. Hence an immense number of 'Carrs' in the present Yorkshire directories; see N. & Q. (Jan. 14, 1888). [Icel. kjarr, copse-wood, brushwood.]

1155. Kerch. 'Kerche or kyrchefe,' Harl., a kerchief. See Volypere, 509. 'Upon hir hed a kerchè of Valence,' Lydgate (Halliwell). Cov. M., p. 318, 'kerchy' (Halliwell). 'Flameum: kerchef,' Voc. 583. 39. [AF. keverchief (cover-head); see Skeat List (2).]

1156. Ketyl hatte, a steel hat. 'Sir W. Langford in 1411 bequeaths to his son a ketill hatte, which is considered by Sir S. Meyrick to have been identical with the visored capelline or steel hat,' Way. 'Keste of his ketille hatte,' Morte Arthur (Halliwell).

1157. Kevle or kevel for hors, a bit for a horse; a gag for the mouth. 'And for the keuel at the laste That in mi mouth was thriste faste,' Havelok, 637. 'In keuel and bridel streyn thaire chekis: In chamo & freno maxillas eorum constringe,' Hampole Ps. xxxi. 12. 'Kewl, a halter brought under the jaws of an unmanageable horse, and passed through his mouth,' Jamieson. 'A kewle: postonis,' Manip. [Icel. kefli, a cylinder, stick, piece of wood; cp. kefla, to gag a lamb, so as to prevent its sucking.]

1158. Kydd, a faggot. 'A kidde, ubi fagott,' Cath. Angl. 'Kydde, a fagotte: falourde,' Palsgrave. 'A kid, faggot: fascis,' Coles. 'Fouace: a great kid, Baven, or fagot of small sticks,' Cotgrave. 'Fouées: the smallest sort of Baven, kids,' ib. Still in use in the country; see Robinson and Peacock.

1159. Kygge or Ioly. 'Kydge,' Heber., lively. 'We pronounce it kidge and apply it exclusively, or nearly so, to hale and cheerful old persons,' Forby. 'Kedge, kedjy, well, hearty, hale,' Moor.

> 'I'm surely growing young again.
> I feel myself so kedge and plump.
> From head to foot I've not one pain.
> Nay, hang me if I couldn't jump.' Bloomfield Rich. & Kate.

'Kedgie, cheerful,' Jamieson.

248. 1160. Kymlyn, a large tub used in bread-making. 'He gooth and geteth him a knedyng-trogh, And after that a tubbe and a kymelyn,' Chaucer C. T. 3621. 'Kimlin, a large tub applied to bread-making among other purposes,' Atkinson. 'Kemelings (old word), a Brewer's Vessel,' Phillips. 'A kimnel, kemlin: Orca, cadus salsamentarius,' Coles. 'Cadus salsamentarius: a powdering tub,' ib.

1161. Kynlyn or harth stoke; see Herth-stok, 220. The word seems to be used in the Cleveland dialect, but in a somewhat different sense: 'Kinlin, easily ignited materials, suitable for lighting a fire; small twigs or brush-wood, and especially the long ling from the moors,' Atkinson. See Kynlyn below. [Lat. Gl. 'Repofocilium: Trefouel [i. e. a fire-dog] . . . Retrofocilium, repofocilium . . . quod vulgo "lander" dicitur,' Ducange.]

1162. Kychyn knaue, a kitchen-boy. [Lat. Gl. 'Lixa, a scullion, a knapsack boy, a drudge,' Coles. 'Hic, hec lixa: a kychyn page,' Voc. 684. 23. 'Lixa: a page of the keschyn,' Voc. 623. 4.]

1163. Kyngis fyschare, the kingfisher. 'King's-fisher, a Bird so called, because it feeds upon Fish, and has blew Feathers resembling a king's purple robe,' Phillips.

1164. Kyngys purs or burs, the royal revenue. 'Hoc fiscale: a kynges porse,' Voc. 782. 3.

1165. Kypptre off a wel, the axle round which the chain of a well is wound. See Kyppen, 253. [Lat. Gl. 'The Catholicon gives the following explanation: "Telonem hortulani vocant lignum quo hauriunt aquam; hoc Hispani ciconiam dicunt, quia imitetur avem illam rostram levantem et deponentem; hujus lignum modo saepe fit super puteos,' WAY.] Col. 248.

1166. Kyrstyan or Krystyan. 'Kyrstyone or Crystyone,' Harl., Christian (a woman's baptismal name). Bardsley remarks (p. 30) that 'as a baptismal name it (Christian) has always been most common in those parts of the eastern coast of England which have been brought into contact with Denmark by trade. Such names as "Joan Cristina," "Brice Cristian" frequently occur in mediaeval registers.' The Scottish form of the name is Kirstin; see YONGE Christian Names, p. 239. 249.

1167. Kytlynge, a whelp, the young of any animal. 'Catulus: a Whelpe or a kytlynge,' Ortus. 'Hic catulus: a kytylyng,' Voc. 699. 25. 'Hic catellus: a cytlyng,' Voc. 758. 41. 'Catulus: a Whelp, kitling, the young of all beasts,' COLES. 'Dan keetlyng of a lyon (catulus leonis, Vulg.),' WYCLIF (1382) Deut. xxxiii. 22. 'Kytlyng: chatton,' PALSGRAVE.

1168. Kyx or bunne of dry wede ('bunne, or drye weed.' Harl.), a dry stalk, generally of hemlock. 'Seguë: Hemlock, Homlock, herb Bennet, Kex,' COTGRAVE. 'Kickes the drie stalke of humlockes or burres: tuyau,' PALSGRAVE. 'Keckes of humblockes,' ib. The dried hemlock-stalk was used as a kind of rushlight; cp. P. Plowman, B, xvii. 219, 'And as glowande gledes gladieth nou3te this werkmen That worchen and waken in wyntres ni3tes As doth a kex or a candel that cau3te hath fyre and blaseth.' The word is still used in many dialects; see WAY. 'Tho' the rough kex break The starr'd mosaic,' TENNYSON Princess, p. 78. [Syn. bunne. 'The . . . lowe places and all the holowe bunnes and pypes that grow therein,' FITZHERBERT Husb. (NED.) 'Kex, hemlock. The same plant is also called bun; but this term is more frequently applied to a kind of rabbit-herbage, growing in hedges,' ROBINSON (2). OE. bune. 'Harundo, calamus: bune' (Voc. 198. 12).]

1169. Knaste or gnaste of a candel, a candle snuff. 'Licinus: a gnast of candel,' Medulla. 'Lichinus: the weke of a candele . . . Lichinus, -na, -num: gnast of candele,' Voc. 592. 30, 31. 'A gnast of a flax top (favilla stupae, Vulg.),' WYCLIF (1382) Is. i. 31. 'Smoke and fyre there can owt welle And many gnostys glowyng on glede,' MS. Camb. (HALLIWELL). [OE. gnást, a spark; Icel. gneisti; OHG. gneista, cneista; see SCHADE, p. 260.]

1170. Knatte, a gnat. 'Hic culex: a knat,' Voc. 767. 25. 'Hec culex: knate,' Voc. 642. 38. [OE. gnætt.]

1171. Knyht a-ventowrs, a knight-errant. 'Knyght of aduentures: cheualier errant,' PALSGRAVE. 'Hic tiro: a knyght,' Voc. 683. 24. 'Hic tiro: a yoing kny3te,' Voc. 782. 12. [Lat. Gl. 'Tiro is explained in the Cath. to be "novus miles, noviter electus ad militiam," but implied perhaps, more properly, the novice in arms who sought occasions for warlike exercise at home and abroad, until his approved prowess should entitle him to the honour of knighthood,' WAY.] 250.

1172. Knoble. 'Knobbe,' Harl., a swelling, a pimple. 'Ne oynement . . . That him mighte helpen . . . Of the knobbes sittyng on his cheekes,' CHAUCER Prol. 633. 1173. Knodone, kneaded. 'Loke we þat þis be not knodyn wiþ us, but holde we us in þe whete flour,' WYCLIF (M.). 'Knodden, pp. of knead,'

Col. 250. Atkinson, Robinson. 'Nodn, pp. of neid (knead),' Wright Windhill Gram. § 372.

1174. Knoppe, the bud of a tree. 'Of knoppes clos, some saw I there, And some wel beter woxen were,' Chaucer R. Rose, 1675. 'But knoppes wille freshe be Two dayes atte leest or thre,' ib. 1683.

251. 1175. Koo. See Coo, 88.

1176. Koley. 'Kocay,' Harl., a privy. The Harl. has the correct form. The word is still in use in East Anglia. It must at one time have been in very common use both at Norwich and Ipswich. Cockey is now used in Norwich for a gutter or drain. In the thirteenth century the word constantly occurs in the Norwich Conveyance Rolls to describe certain water-courses which ran through the city. About this time they began to be covered over and were finally utilized as public drains. See Hudson Leet Jurisdiction, Norwich (Selden Soc.); Nall Glossary; Rye Vocab. East Anglia (in Norfolk Antiq. Misc. iii. p. 491, A.D. 1887).

1545. Opun synnar withowtyn shame: publicanus. [Lat. Gl. is due to a misunderstanding of the well-known N. T. technical term publicanus, a collector of the public taxes. We find the same mistaken notion about the Vulg. word in the Icel. ber-syndugr, a bare (open) sinner, a publican; and in the Lind. Rushw. Gospels bær-synnig (an open sinner) is sometimes the rendering for publicanus (= Gr. τελώνης).]

319. 1546. Orfrey. 'Orfrays, embroidery. "The term is perhaps most generally applied to the borders of embroidery or needlework, down the cope on each side in front. Cp. 'Orphrey of red velvet,'" Dugdale' (Halliwell). 'And of fyn orfrays had she eke A chapelet,' Chaucer R. Rose, 562. [OF. orfrais.] Col. 319.

1547. Orlage, an indicator of time, either a sun-dial or a clock. See Pyn, 336, and Dyal, 125. 'Hoc orologium: orlage,' Voc. 648. 38. 'I herde the orlage of the couent that rang for the matynes as it was wont,' De Deguileville (C., p. 188). 'The cok, that orloge is of thorpes lyte,' Chaucer M. P. v. 350. [OF. orloge; Lat. horologium; Gr. ὡρολόγιον; cp. Sp. 'relóx, a clocke, a diall, an houre-glasse' (Minsheu).]

1548. Ornwode. This word is probably an error. Harl. has orpud, which is not an uncommon word, meaning stout, courageous. 'Houndes ther be the whiche beth bolde and orpede, and beth cleped bolde, for thei be bolde and goode for the hert,' MS. (Halliwell). 'Doukes, kinges and barouns, Orped squiers and garsouns,' Arth. & Merlin (ib.). 'That they wol get of here accorde Some orped knight to sle this lorde,' Gower, i. 129. [OE. orped.]

1549. Orpyn, the name of a herb, orpine, one of the stone-crops. See Stoon croppe, 439. 'Crassula major, aurum valet, anglicè orpin. Crassula minor, vermicularis, anglicè stan croppe,' Bart. 'Orpine [evergreen]: Crassula semper vireus,' Coles. 'Coole Violets and Orpine growing still,' Spenser Mniopotmos, 193. [F. 'Orpin: Orpin, Liblong or Livelong, an herb' (Cotgrave); a popular form of orpiment; Lat. auripigmentum, a name for the yellow sulphuret of arsenic; see Alphita, p. 13.]

1550. Osprynge, offspring. 'I wolde that Bradmonde the kyng Were here with all his ospryng,' MS. Cantab. (Halliwell). [OE. ofspring, offspring.] 320.

1551. Ooth, mad. [Icel. óðr; cp. OE. wód. See Wood, 532.]

1552. Ovyr wharte, transverse. Ovyrqvertly, transversely. [Cp. Icel. þverr, across, þvert neut., and in adverbial phrases; also G. quer.] 321.

1553. Owlyste, sluggish. [Cp. Icel. ú-lyst, a bad appetite; ú-lystugr, unwilling. Cp. Lyst, 265.]

1558. Ondyn, to breathe. 'To Ande: Afflare, Spirare,' Cath. Angl. 'Aspiro: to ondyn,' Medulla. [Icel. anda, to breathe.] 323.

1559. On-qwelmyn, to uncover. With this word we may take Ovyr-qwelmyn (or qwelme), to overwhelm, 324. See Whelmun, 543.

1560. Ovyrledyn, to oppress. 'Shal neither kynge ne kny3te, constable ne meire ouer-lede the comune,' P. Plowman, B, iii. 314. [OE. oferlǽdan, to oppress.] 324.

1561. Ouertyrnyn. The correct reading is Ouertyruyn, as we may see from the various readings in Way. 'To ourtyrve, owrtyrwe, to turn upside down,' Jamieson. 'Turfe of a cappe: rebras,' Palsgrave. [Cp. Cotgrave: 'Rebras: A turning up, a tucking or folding upwards or inwards.'] 'Tuke out þe tuskes & þe tethe & teruen of þe skinnes,' Wars Alex. 4114. 'Til he had

Col. 324. terued him coude he not blinne,' CHAUCER C. T. G. 1171. 'The deuel out of his skin Him terve,' ib. 1274. See note on this word in Skeat's Glossarial Index to Chaucer (1894).

1562. Owmawhtyn. See Owmahttynge, 321; Swownyn, 471.

1563. Owt-takyn, to except. 'I outtake, I except: Je excepte. I wyll ron as swyftly as any man in this towne I outtake none for a bonette: Je courray aussi viste que homme de ceste ville je nexcepte nul pour ung bonnet,' PALSGRAVE.

1564. Pacyence, the name of a plant. 'Patientie: Herb patience, Monks Rhubarb,' COTGRAVE. 'Patience: Hippolapatum,' COLES. [Cp. Gr. ἱππολάπαθον, horse-sorrel,' DIOSC.] 'Patience, an Herb, being a sort of large and very sower Sorrel,' PHILLIPS.

325. 1565. Paynmayne, bread of a superior quality, made of the finest flour. 'Panis similaginius: paynmayn,' Voc. 657. 26. 'Paynemayn prevayly Sche brou3th fram the pantry,' Degrevant, 1394. 'Whyt was his face as payndemayn,' CHAUCER C. T. B. 1915. [OF. pain demaine; Lat. panis dominicus, bread of our Lord. Simnels made of the very finest flour were thus called, from an impression on them of the effigy of our Saviour. See Liber Albus, p. 305.]

326. 1566. Palette, armour for the head. 'Inglis men sall 3it to-3ere knok thi palet or thou pas,' Minot (WAY). 'A prevy pallette . . . to hille here lewde heed in stede of an hove,' Rich. the R. iii. 325. 'Hec cassis: a palett,' Voc. 782. 34. [AF. palet (LA CURNE).]

1567. Payly. 'Paille: chaffe, the huske wherein corn lieth,' COTGRAVE.

1568. Palyce or paly, a fence of pales. 'Palys of a parke'; see Pale, 325. [F. 'Pallis or Pali, a pale or thick lath, a stake, pole or pile' (COTGRAVE).]

1569. Paltoke, a garment like a short cloak with sleeves. 'Palletoque, a Cassock or short Cloak with Sleeves, such as Pages wear,' PHILLIPS. 'Paltocke of lethyr: pellice. Paltocke, a garment: halcret. Paltocke, a patche: palleteau,' PALSGRAVE. 'Hec bombesina: a paltoke,' Voc. 775. 7. 'In Piers paltok the Plowman this priker shal ryde,' P. Plowman, B, xviii. 25. 'Proude prestes come with hym . . . In paltokes and pyked shoes,' ib. xx. 218. [F. 'Palletoc, a long and thick Pelt or Cassock' (COTGRAVE).]

1570. Pantere, a snare for birds. 'The birdd was trapped and kaute with a pantere,' LYDGATE (HALLIWELL). 'Panther to catche byrdes with: panneau,' PALSGRAVE. 1579. Parowre of a vestment, a term applied particularly to the ornamental work on the alb. 'I bequethe to the said chirche ane hole sute of vestmyntes of russet velvet. One coope, chesible diacones for decones ; with the awbes and parures,' Test. Vetust. (HALLIWELL). [OF. pareüre ; Lat. paratura ; see DUCANGE.]

1580. Party cloth, cloth of divers colours. Cp. 'party-coated,' dressed in a coat of divers colours, and 'party-coloured,' having divers colours, in SHAKS. [See DUCANGE (s. v. partitae vestes).]

1581. Parvyce, in the Prompt. the porch or cloisters of a monastery where the monks were allowed to converse. The word generally means the porch in front of a church. The church of St. Paul's, London, and St. Mary's, Oxford, had each its parvis. That of St. Paul's is mentioned in CHAUCER C. T. 310, 'A Sergeant of the Lawe war and wys, That often hadde been at the parvys.' It was here that the lawyers used to meet for consultation. This name for the porch of St. Mary's, Oxford, still survives in the University. Students who are examined in Responsions (or 'Smalls') are described in the official lists as 'Respondentes in Parviso,' i.e. (originally) answering questions put by the Masters of the Schools 'in Parviso,' in the porch of the University Church. [OF. parvis, a church porch, the outer court of a palace (hence MLat. parvisum in DUCANGE). Older F. forms of the word are pareïs, paraïs ; Late Lat. paradisus, the portico of St. Peter's, Rome ; also in the Vulg. the equivalent of the Gr. παράδεισος, (1) the garden of Eden, (2) the 329.

Col. 329. gathering place of happy souls after death. In classical Gr. it occurs in the sense of 'a park, pleasure-ground'; probably of Persian origin. See M. & S., and Obed. Rolls (glossary).]

1582. Pastelere, a maker of pastry. 'A Pasteler: pastillarius,' Cath. Angl. 'Pastler that baketh: pastisier,' Palsgrave. 'Dulciarius: a pastlar,' Elyot (Way). 'Ceragius: a Pasteler,' Coles. [Lat. Gl. 'Ceragius: a baker,' Medulla. 'Ceragius i. pistor.: a pot baker,' Ortus. Cp. 'Ceragium: a bakyng-place for stone or pottes of claye,' Ortus.]

1583. Pateyne, a patten, used by ecclesiastics probably to protect the feet from the chill of the bare pavement of a church—a practice often condemned severely by the authorities. 'A Patan: calopodium, lignipes, lignipedum.' Cath. Angl. 'A Wooden Patten: Sculponea, Buxea,' Coles. 'Paten for a fote: galoche,' Palsgrave. [F. 'Patin: a pattin or clog' (Cotgrave).]

1584. Patrone, a pattern. 'Achas sent a patrone and symilitude of the same altare,' Coverdale 4 Kings xvi. 'Patron example: patron,' Palsgrave. 'Sacred to the memory of S. B., aged 27 years. . . . The patron of patience and resignation. Winterton Churchyard,' Peacock. [F. Patron, a Patron, Protector . . . the Master of a Ship . . . Master of a house; also, a pattern, sample, example, precedent' (Cotgrave); Lat. 'Patronus, Autographum, Gall. Original; exemplar seu Charta enumerationis; archetypum, specimen' (Ducange).]

1585. Powwe of a best. 'Pawe of a beest,' Harl., a paw. See Stratmann. 'Everich powe a span long,' Arth. & Merl. (Halliwell). 'Pawe of a beest: patte,' Palsgrave. [AF. powe (Skeat List); OF. poe; Prov. pauto; cp. Du. poot, G. Pfote; see Kluge.]

1586. Pavyce, a kind of large shield of plain wood, or covered with skins. See M. & S. 'At the nether ende of the pavisse,' MS. Linc. (Halliwell). 'And after that the shotte was done, whiche they defended with parishes,' Hall Henry VIII (ib.). 'With many a prowd pavys,' Rel. Antiq. (ib.) 'Hec sestus: a pavis,' Voc. 784. 10. 1592. Pawytnere. 'Pawtenere,' Harl., a pouch, purse. 'Marsupium : a pawtener, a pouche,' Medulla. 'Cremena : a pautener or syluere,' Ortus. 'Cassidile : a pautener,' Medulla. 'Caxton mentions in the Book for Travellers "pawteners, tasses : aloyeres, tasses,"' Way. 'Pautner : malette,' Palsgrave. 'Marsupium : a pautener,' Voc. 595. 6. 'Lo! hyt ys here in my pawtenere,' MS. Cantab. (Halliwell). [F. 'Pautonniere, a Shepherd's scrip' (Cotgrave). See Ducange (s. v. pantonarius).]

1593. Pax brede, a small tablet of wood or metal, kissed by the faithful in the service of the mass, the Pax board, 'tabula pro pace,' called in French portepaix, in Spanish portapaz ; see Ducange. 'In the will of Henry le Scrop, 1415, is mentioned "una Paxbrede argentea et deaurata." In an Inventory of S. Dunstan's, Canterbury, 1500, occurs "a crucifix for a pax borde off coper and gylt",' Way. 'Paxulum, anglicè paxbrede,' Ortus. 'Hoc osculatorium : a paxbrede,' Voc. 756. 14. The Icelandic name for this tablet was pax-spjald ; see Vigfusson. See Dict. Ch. Antiq. (s. v. kiss).

1594. Pax or kissing. The Latin word 'pax,' i. e. peace, came to be used in Church Latin for the 'osculum pacis,' the kiss of peace, and hence it came to be used in the sense of a kiss. See Ducange (s. v. pax), where we find many passages quoted wherein 'pacem dare' is used as equivalent to 'osculari.' From this use of 'pax' Ir. pòg (= Lat. pacem) means a kiss ; see Macbain Etym. Dict. (s. v. pòg). See above.

1595. Paxwax, the strong tendon in the neck of animals. Bp. Kennett gives this as a Norfolk word, and Peacock as a Lincolnshire one. It is perhaps a form of 'fax-wax.' 'Le vendon : the fax-wax,' MS. (Skeat). 'Le wenne : fex wex,' W. de Biblesworth (Way). [Probably from OE. feax (fex), hair + weax, increase, growth. The German equivalent for 'pax*wax*' is 'haar*wachs*.']

1596. Pece, a cup. 'A Pece of siluer or of metalle : crater, cratera,' Cath. Angl. 'Crater : pece,' Voc. 626. 'A broad peece or boll of gold or silver : patera,' Baret. 'I pownce a cuppe or a pece as goldesmythes do,' Palsgrave. 'Pece, a cuppe : tasse, hanap,' ib. 'Peces masars and spones,' R. Hood (Halliwell). [Lat. Gl. 'Pecia, vas, calix, cyathus,' Ducange.]

2608. Wone, custom. 'Alway for to slepe hir wone is,' Chaucer Hous of F. 76. 'Hus wone is to wende in pilgrymages,' P. Plowman, C, xvii. 321. [OE. (ge)wuna.]

2609. Wone, great plenty. 'And gaf hym golde, good woon, that gladded his herte,' P. Plowman, B, xx. 170. 'Cam knyghtis muche wone,' K. Alis. 1468 (Way). 'He swore he hadde beter won of ryche tresour thenne hast thou,' R. Coer de Lion, 3548 (ib.). [Icel. ván, hope, expectation. See Stratmann (s. v. wān), Zupitza Guy of Warwick, p. 444.]

2610. Wong of lond, a plain, field. 'Casteles and tunes, wodes and wonges,' Havelok, 397. [OE. wong (wang), Icel. vangr, a green home-field, Go. waggs (= παράδεισος 2 Cor. xii. 4).]

2611. Wopone. 'Wopne or pysse,' Harl. [Cp. OE. wǽpn, a weapon, also 'membrum virile.'] 534.

2612. Wose, ooze, slime, mud. 'Wiþ þe wose of þe wede hire wengis anoyntis,' Wars Alex. 413. 'Right as weodes wexen in wose and in donge,' P. Plowman, C, xiii. 229. [OE. wáse, ooze, mud, dirt, water meadow, foreshore; cp. Icel. veisa, a pool, pond of stagnant water.]

2613. Wowe, a wall. See M. & S. 'I shal . . . Wowes do whiten, and wyndowes glasen,' P. Plowman, B, iii. 61. 'Til waghe heldid and til wall down put (=tanquam parieti inclinato & macerie depulse),' Hampole Ps. lxi. 3. [OE. wáh (wág-); cp. Icel. veggr, Go. waddjus, prim. Germ. waijus (wajjus); cp. also Du. weeg; see Franck.]

2614. Wowyn, weighed. [This points to an OE. wogen*, instead of wegen, pp. of wegan, to carry, to weigh. So in Beowulf, 2981, dropen is found instead of drepen, pp. of drepan.]

2615. Wrak, vengeance. See M. & S. 'After werre and wrake whanne loue and pees beon maistres,' P. Plowman, C, xxi. 459. 'Þat oþer wrake þat wex,' Allit. P. 235. [OE. wracu, vengeance, misery.]

2616. Wraw, froward, ungodly. See Crabbyd, 99. 'And with this speche the cook wex wrooth and wraw,' Chaucer C. T. H. 46. 'Accidie maketh him hevy thoghtful, and wrawe,' ib. I. 675. [Cp. Icel. rá (for vrá), a corner; cognate of OE. wrang, wrong; rá being from a prim. base wranha-.] 535.

2617. Wrawnesse, frowardness, perverseness. 'Accidie . . . dooth alle thing with anoy and with wrawnesse,' Chaucer C. T. I. 675.

2618. Wreke, sea-weed. 'Wreke, sea-weed,' Nom. MS. (Halliwell). [Icel. rek (vrek), also reki (vreki), a thing drifted ashore.]

2619. Wrench, a trick, deceit. See M. & S. 'His wyly wrenches thou ne mayst nat flee,' Chaucer C. T. G. 1081. 'Harald þat euere was of luþer wrenche,' Rob. Glouc. [OE. wrenc.]

2620. Wrest of an harp, a tuning-key. The word occurs in this sense in Salesbury. 'A Wrest to tune with: Plectrum, pecten,' Coles. 'Wrest for a harpe: broche de harpe,' Palsgrave. 'A Wrest for an instrument: plectrum,' Manip.

2621. Wrett, a wart. 'Wret-weed, the wild euphorbia, which is sometimes used to cure warts. A wart is still called wret in Norfolk'; see Forby. 'Upon the cop right of his nose he hade A werte (v.r. wrete),' Chaucer C. T. 555. 'Warte on ones hande: verbe, poyreau,' Palsgrave. [OE. wearta, a wart, Icel. varta.]

Col. 535. 2622. Wret of a pap, the teat of a breast. I cannot find another instance of wret in this sense. The gloss seems to be a monkish mistake. [Lat. Gl. 'Papilla : tittstrycel,' Voc. 158. 44.]

2623. Wreth, wrath. 'Than he sall spek till thaim in his wreth,' Hampole Ps. ii. 5. [OE. wráððu.]

536. 2624. Wrecchyn or wreyin. Read Wretthyn or wreþyn. 'Wrythyn or wrethyn,' Harl., twisted, writhed or wreathed. 'A wrethen neddire,' Cath. Angl. 5526.

2625. Wundrel. 'Wunderelle,' Harl., a prodigy, a portent.

537. 2626. Wundyre grete or hygiows ('hydows,' Harl.). Cp. Hydows, 222.

2627. Wunt, wont. 'Squyers þat were wunt to serue Pers,' R. Brunne H.S. 5874. [OE. (ge)wunod, pp. of gewunian, to be accustomed.]

2628. Worth . . . þe valure of a thynge. [Syn. 'Valour, Valure, value,' Jamieson. 'The beste and grettest of valour,' Chaucer R. Rose, 1043. OF. valur (mod. valeur), worth, value ; Lat. 'valor, precium rei' (Ortus).]

2629. Waymentyn, to lament. 'Thilke science maketh a man to waymenten in his herte,' Chaucer C. T. I. 230. '(I will) wash thy wounds with my waymenting tears,' Gascoigne (Nares). 'What bootes it to weepe and to wayment,' Spenser F. Q. ii. 1. 16. [OF. (se)guaimenter, waimenter.]

538. 2630. Walloppyn, to gallop. The word walopen occurs in Rom. Partenay, 4827 ; cp. Morte Arthur, 2827 ; see Skeat (s. v. gallop), and Way. 'To Wallop, to gallop,' Jamieson. 'He rade and walloped owre the green,' Black Adam (Heslop).

2631. Wamelyn in þe stomak, to feel nausea. 'I wamble as ones stomacke dothe : Je allecte,' Palsgrave. 'Allecter : to wamble as a queasie stomach doth,' Cotgrave.

2632. Wanhopyn, to despair. 'Wanhope : desperacio,' Cath. Angl. 'I sterve in wanhope and distresse,' Chaucer C. T. 1249. 'Sleuthe . . . wedded on Wanhope,' P. Plowman, C, xxiii. 160. [Cp. Du. wanhoop, despair.]

2633. Wanshon, Wanson : Evaneo. Harl. adds 'Wanson or wanyn as þe mone : Decresco.' See Stratmann. [OE. wansian, to diminish, lessen.]

2634. Wappon, to cover up. 'To Wap, to wrap, to envelope,' Jamieson. 'Wap, to wrap, especially to wrap up protectively. "Just wap a string aboot it." "Wap't up i' broon paper",' Heslop. Cp. wrappe in Palsgrave : 'I wrappe, I folde a thyng in an other : Je enveloppe.'

539. 2635. Wappon, to bark. 'Wap, to yelp, to bark. Somerset,' Halliwell. The word is used of the sound of water against the rocks : 'I sawe no thynge but the waters wappe and wawes wanne,' Malory Morte d'Arthur xxi. 5.

2636. Waryn, to lay out money. 'I bestowe or ware money upon a marchandyse or anythyng that I bye : Jemploye,' Palsgrave. 'I have ware'd all the monay in my purse to daye,' ib. 'I trow our labour were well wair'd,' Heslop. [Icel. verja, to clothe, to invest money, to spend.]

2637. Waryn. 'Waryyn,' Harl., to curse. 'Thei shal wary and thou shal blesse,' Hampole Ps. cviii. 27. 'He bigan to warie and to swere,' Wyclif Matt. xxvi. 74. 'I warrye, I banne or curse : Je mauldis. This is a farre northren terme,' Palsgrave. [OE. wergan (wiergan), to curse ; cp. wearh, an accursed one, a criminal.]

2638. Warshyn, to recover from sickness. 'I warysshe, I recover my helth after a sycknesse or daunger (Lydgate) : Je me guaris. This terme is nowe lytel used, thoughe Lydgate hath it often,' Palsgrave. 'Your doghter, with the grace of God, shal warisshe and escape,' Chaucer C. T. b. 2170. Col. 539.

2639. Wawyn, to move from side to side. 'In Kyng Alis. 1164 we read that it was right merry in hall "when burdes wawen alle,"' Way. [OE. wagian, to shake, to totter.] 540.

2640. Wedyryn, to hang clothes in the open air. 'I ayre or wether, as men do thynges whan they lay them in the open ayre, or as any lynen thyng is after it is newe wasshed: Jayre,' Palsgrave. 541.

2641. Weldon, to govern, to control. 'ȝe faren lyke thise woweres That wedde none wydwes but forto welde here godis,' P. Plowman, B, xi. 72. [OE. wealdan.]

2642. Wellyn metyl, to weld. 'Thei schulen welle togidere her swerdis into scharris,' Wyclif Is. ii. 4. 'A wellin heat, a welding heat,' Heslop. [Cp. Sw. välla järn, to weld iron.] 542.

2643. Welkyn, to wither. See M. & S. 'Thair flour welkes,' Hampole Ps. lxxii. 17 c. 'For which ful pale and welked is my face,' Chaucer C. T. c. 737. [Cp. G. and Du. welken, to wither.]

2644. Weltryn, to welter. Cp. Waltring, 514. 'I welter: je verse. Thou welterest in the myer as thou were a sowe,' Palsgrave. 'I walter, I tumble: je me voystre,' ib. [Cp. Sw. vältra.]

2645. Welwyn (so Harl.), to roll (trans.). See M. & S. (s. v. walwen). 'And (Joseph) walewide a stoon to the dore of the sepulcre,' Wyclif Mark xv. 46. [OE. wealwian, to roll (trans).]

2646. Weryyn, to defend. 'On fote himself to were,' Chaucer C. T. 2550. 'Florens . . . was an hyrde shepe to were,' MS. (Halliwell). [OE. werian; cp. G. wehren.]

2647. Werkyn, to ache (esp. of the head). See Werkynge, 523. 'Swa werkes ay the wanges in his heed,' Chaucer C. T. 4030. 'Sa sare werkis hire ȝe wame,' Wars Alex. 531. 'To Wark, Werk, to ache,' Jamieson. [Icel. verkja, to feel pain.] 543.

2648. Whakyn, to quake, to tremble. 'Whake, to quake. Whaker, a quaker. North,' Halliwell. See Quakyn, 363.

2649. Whelmun, a vessel, to overturn. See Turnyn, 504; Ovyrqwelmyn, 324. 'I whelme an holowe thyng over an other thyng: Je mets dessus. Whelme a platter upon it to save it from flyes,' Palsgrave. 'Tak a bryghte bacyne and anoynte it with mylke reme, and whelme it over a prene,' MS. Linc. (Halliwell). 'Whemmle a swill ower the hen (i. e. invert a basket over it),' Heslop.

2650. Wheth teth. 'Whette tethe,' Harl., to grind the teeth as boars do. 'I whette my tethe, I gnasshe or grate them togyther for anger: Je grynse des dens,' Palsgrave.

2651. Whykyn (so Harl.) or make whyke, to vivify. Perhaps for whyknyn, cp. Quyknyn (to quicken), 363.

2652. Whyrlyn, abowtyn, to wander about and around in idleness. Cp. wyrylwynd under Rowdyows beast, 378. 544.

2653. Wyncyn, to kick. '(It) winseth and flingeth out like a skittish and frampold horse,' Holland Plutarch's Morals, p. 14. 'Poul . . . long tyme wynside agen the pricke,' Wyclif (Trench). 'To wince: calcitrare,' Manip. 'Gyll begynneth to wyncke: la Gillote commence a regymber,' Palsgrave. 'Regimber: to wince, kick,' Cotgrave. 'For it is the wone of Wil to wynse and to kike.' P. Plowman, C, v. 22.

Col. 545. 2654. Wynd with wyndas. 'A Wyndas: troclea,' Cath. Angl. 'Wyndace for an engyn: guyndas,' PALSGRAVE. 'Engyn of windas or polyve,' CHAUCER C. T. F. 184. [Icel. vind-ass; cp. Go. ans, a beam.]

2655. Wynwyn, to winnow. 'Whos wynewing cloth is in his hoond,' WYCLIF Matt. iii. 12. Wyclif renders Lat. ventilare by windewen (some MSS. wynewen) in Jer. xlix. 36. [OE. windwian.]

2656. Wyrwyne, to strangle. 'He (the wolf) wolde hem wirie (v. r. wery) and drinke the blood,' R. Rose, 6264. [OE. wyrgan; cp. OHG. wurgen.]

2657. Wyssyn, to lead. 'Virgine . . . thou me wisse and counsaile,' CHAUCER M. P. i. 155. 'Wit and hus wif wissed me to hym,' P. Plowman, C, xii. 140. [OE. wissian, to guide, direct.]

2658. Wyth-clepyn, to recall. Trevisa frequently uses withclepe to render Higden's 'revocare,' v. 209, 371; vi. 267; vii. 455.

2659. Wyth-seyne, to contradict. See Reclayme, 382. 'Thow schuldest not hys wed wythsay,' MS. Coll. (HALLIWELL). 'I withsaye, I say naye: Je desdis. Sythe I have sayd it I wyll never withsay it,' PALSGRAVE. 'And who so wol my jugement withseye Shal paye al that we spenden by the weye,' CHAUCER C. T. 804. [OE. wiðsecgan.]

2660. Wyth-settyn, to resist. 'Myȝte we with eny wyt hus wil with-sette,' P. Plowman, C, i. 174. [OE. wiðsettan, to withstand, resist.]

2661. Wetyn, to know. 'Wytyn or wetyn,' Harl. See M. & S. (s. v. witen). 'I wyte, I knowe: Je scay. This is to do you to wete,' PALSGRAVE. [OE. witan.]

546. 2662. Wonone, to dwell. See M. & S. (s. v. wonen). 'Here is no dwellyng for us to wone,' Chester Plays (HALLIWELL). 'In which they woneden in reste and pees,' CHAUCER C. T. 2927. [OE. wunian.]

2663. Wourschepyn, to honour man, to worship God. See M. & S. (s. v. worschipen). 'I worshyp a man: Je honore. I have ever worshypped hym for his great vertues. I worshyp God: Je aoure. Worshyppe God above all thynges,' PALSGRAVE.

2664. Wowyn, to woo. See M. & S. 'And wowed her to have her to his wyf,' CHAUCER L. G. W. 1247. 'Men shal not wowe a wight in hevinesse,' ib. Tr. & Cr. v. 791. [OE. wógian.]
